Genetic Marketing Provides Extra Income For Berks Dairyman

FLEETWOOD (Berks Co.) — "If you're going to go through all of the motions, why not do the best job you can so you can make some extra money from it?" said Jim Younkers.

Younkers and his wife Susan milk 65 cows at Kirbyville Holsteins in Fleetwood.

"We register, classify, and test the herd to get the most out of the animals that we can," said Younkers. "But, with today's technology, it's just extra money thrown away if we don't merchandise."

The Younkers started farming six years ago when an 85-acre farm that his father Martin Younkers had rented came up for sale.

"I had been working for several years as an A I technician and really wanted to start dairy farming on my own," said Younkers. "My parents told me that they helped me as much as

BRADFORD

Third Largest Dairy County's Milk Worth $60 Million

Gary Hennip
Bradford Co. Dairy Extension Agent

Milk production continues to play a very important role in the economy of Bradford County. Dairy production is the number one agriculture industry in the county, and in turn, agriculture continues to be Bradford County's prime enterprise.

The county has 460 commercial dairy farms with the average herd size around 66 cows. These producers sold over 60 million dollars worth of milk last year, making Bradford County the 3rd largest dairy county in Pennsylvania, behind Lancaster and Franklin.

What trends are we seeing in our County's dairy industry? First, although we continue to be 3rd in dairy cow numbers, a look back 10 years ago gives us some idea of changes that have taken place and offers insight as to possible trends in the future.

Here's the breakdown of the Bradford County dairy indus-

Volatile Year For Dairy Industry

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Resiliency isn't listed as a prerequisite for dairy farming. But it should be.

After the past year of tremendous highs and lows, it's become apparent that dairy producers need to be resilient just to survive.

"We are going to have highs and lows in the dairy industry, and there are going to be lags in between," said Ken Bailey, professor of economics at Penn State. "Farmers are going to have to adjust to it, and we have to think about how we are going to do that."

At this time last year, dairy farmers were enjoying record high prices with the all-milk price for the Pennsylvania dairy industry averaging $16.80 per hundredweight. In March 2000, the all-milk price averaged $12.90 per hundredweight, a four-dollar drop from last year at this time.

"When the commodity price for cheese shot up to $1.70, that signaled a crash in milk prices," said Bailey. "Supply caught up with demand, and the growth in milk supply continued, driving milk prices down."

Significant events that happened from last June until now included the drought of 1999, which left farmers with losses on their cash crops and poor quality forages to feed their animals.

According to the Associated Press, one-year rainfall totals in 1999 were 10 to 18 inches below normal over much of eastern and southern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, central and western Maryland and parts of Virginia.

In July, rainfall in parts of Pennsylvania and Maryland was below one inch, making it the driest July on record.

CATTLE: Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers and a thin test of slaughter heifers sold .50 to mostly 1.00 higher with late sales as much as 1.50 higher. Prices ended the week firm to 1.00 higher than last Thursday. Supply was fairly light, but very high in quality and enabled the market to recover from early week losses. Holstein steer prices remained mostly steady. The slaughter cows sold weak to 1.00 lower and an outstanding run of slaughter bulls sold firm. Supply included 49 pct slaughter steers and 30 pct cows.

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers and heifers closed firm to 1.00 higher on a light week's test due to Memorial Day and Ascension Day observance. The difference between early and late week market conditions was like night and day. Buyers wanted to continue the downward trend after last week's losses, but good demand on Thursday from the few small packers left in the area pushed prices well above last week's levels. The current local supply of finished cattle is too light to allow lower prices in the auction markets with both small and large packers competing for the same cattle. Western feeders managed to sell their cattle steady this week at 69.00-69.50 and 110.00-111.00. Local Holstein steer trading was fairly slow and prices ended steady to .50 lower. Slaughter cows closed steady to 1.00 lower, with the full decline on the fleshier types (less than 85 pct lean). A good test of slaughter bulls sold firm. Supply included 45 percent slaughter steers, 7 percent slaughter heifers, 38 percent slaughter cows, 6 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1185-1470 lbs 71.75-76.10, few singles up to 77.00; late mostly 74.00-75.75. Choice 2-3 1120-1480 lbs 70.50- 73.75; 1490-1575 lbs 68.00-70.60. Select and low Choice 2-3 1000-1500 lbs 66.00-70.75. Select 1-3 945-1495 lbs 63.00-67.75.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Wed May 31, 2000

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Grain and soybean bids finished mostly higher, Wednesday, supported by some overnight export sales of wheat and beans and corrections after Tuesday's sharp declines. Wheat mixed. Corn steady to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 8 cents lower. Soybeans 1 to 3 cents higher.

Export wheat purchase by Egypt overnight offered some strength to bids.

Additional support stemmed from declining crop conditions for hard red winter and soft red winter wheat crops due to hot temperatures and recent heavy rains. Many areas show disease development in crops receiving too much rain. Light profit taking on the Board was noted today in wheat pits.

Corn and soybean bids were slightly higher following sharp declines Tuesday. Some export business has been reported for soybeans and talks of possible corn sales, underpinned bids. Wet weather forecast for the central U.S. and good crop condition, limited gains for both commodities.

Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary

Compared to last week: Feeder cattle and calves poorly tested due to light receipts following Memorial holiday. Few feeder cattle near steady. Feeder demand moderate. Stockers and calves steady to 5.00 lower. Demand very light for calves and stockers as wheat harvest just underway and farmers not interested in receiving pasture cattle. Rains in the north a plus for feeders as corn and bean futures dropped sharply Tuesday. Slaughter cows steady to 1.00 higher. Slaughter bulls steady. Packer demand good for light receipts. Total of 155 cows and bulls sold with 35 percent going to packers.

Receipts this holiday week 2,985; last week 16,546; last year 4,114.

Supply consisted of 54 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 41 percent calves under 600 lbs; 5 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 46 percent of feeder and calf supply.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JUNE 5-11, 2000

SHAVUOT, JUNE 9.

ST. BARNABAS DAY

St. Barnabas Day, on June 11, was traditionally the time for the start of haying. The most favorable time to cut hay, according to moonlore, is right after the full Moon, on June 16 this year. St. Barnabas Day was also when the churches were decorated with box, woodruff, lavender, and roses. This patron saint (along with St. Francis of Assisi) was commonly invoked as a peacemaker or against hailstorms, as was his near calendar neighbor, St. John the Baptist (June 24). St. Barnabas was a companion of St. Paul and is often depicted with him. Bearded and middle-aged, St. Barnabas generally carries an olive branch or a book in his portraits.

On St. Barnabas, put the scythe to the grass.

TIP OF THE WEEK

CHOCOLATE BANANA PUDDING

1 cup chocolate chips, melted
2 ripe bananas
1 cup plain or vanilla yogurt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 tablespoon orange juice
pinch of salt
4 to 6 fresh berries, for garnish

Melt chocolate over a double boiler (or in a microwave oven). Meanwhile, place bananas, in chunks, and yogurt into a blender, and pulse to just mix. Add remaining ingredients and blend briefly. When chocolate is melted, add to the banana mixture and blend to just mix. (It's okay if the chocolate is still quite hot.) Pour pudding into individual serving dishes, cover tightly with plastic wrap, and chill for at least 2 hours. Serve with fresh berries on top.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

When rain falls on St. Barnabas Day, it is good for grapes.

If a north wind blows in June, rye will be splendid at harvest time.

A cold and wet June spoils the rest of the year.

Randy, Brian, Scott and Dennis Prissel, Prissel Valley Farms Durand, Wisconsin

Prissels chose a "True Tax" lease. In fact, they leased a milking parlor, free stall barns, silos and other farm equipment. Along with fixed and 100% tax deductible lease payments, the leases protected their equity ratios by providing off balance sheet financing.

They chose Telmark for its knowledge of the dairy industry, service and reputation for financing. They also enjoyed working with their Telmark representative who personally knows the ups and downs of farming.

Brian Prissel and Telmark's Scott Vosters

By financing with a lease, terms were kept to a minimum, allowing for the continued growth of the operation. Telmark's quick response allowed the Prissels to move quickly into their dairy expansion.

OPINION

Biosecurity For Profitability

Biosecurity on dairy farms in the past was not considered very important. Unlike the confinement practices of other species, cows were not as concentrated, they were large animals often free to run in the pasture, and considered to have no great susceptibility to diseases from other farms. The Registered dairy cow business was enhanced by having truckers from a by-gone era such as the Hostetter brothers of Lancaster, transport purebred animals in disinfected trucks. But beyond this, trucks and visitors to a dairy farm were not considered a threat to herd health.

But today, this idea has been updated along with most other good management practices. Many technological advances in the diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of disease have contributed significantly to the increase in dairy farm production and productivity. In order for disease to occur on a farm, the host animal, the disease organism, and the environment must interact favorable. The aim of biosecurity is to intervene strategically, thus preventing this interaction.

According to Maurice Clarke, D.V.M., field veterinarian, Maryland Department of Agriculture, if the dairy farm is to be successful, the importance of biosecurity must be emphasized. The objective is to prevent disease from being introduced on the farm and to prevent infectious disease from moving among animal groups on the farm. Clarke says young calves and older and weak animals are very susceptible to infectious organisms and should be kept in separate groups away from the general dairy herd. Use the proper antibiotics to treat sick animals and make every effort to insure that the animal environment on the farm is clean. Sanitation is critical for a successful disease control program.

Visitors to the farm should not be allowed unrestricted movement on the farm. They should observe the same protocol as farm workers which includes disinfecting boots and changing clothing before moving to a different group of animals on the farm. Many dairy farmers will consider this impractical—until they have a major outbreak of animal sickness that leads to a large bill from their veternarian. Then they will begin to take seriously the need for biosecurity.

To us, it would make more sense to start biosecurity before you have a costly disease problem on your dairy farm.

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Look For Poisonous Plants — I

Pennsylvania has about 100 toxic plants. Many of these may cause deaths of numerous domestic livestock every year, according to Chester Hughes, Lancaster County extension livestock agent.

Factors contributing to plant poisoning are starvation, accidental eating, and browsing habits of animals.

With houses springing up everywhere, the rural/urban interface is dramatically increasing and many farm neighbors are unfamiliar with the plants that are toxic.

Following are some common plants that are poisonous to livestock and should not be tossed over the fence to grazing animals.

Garden iris will produce gastroenteritis when ingested in sufficient amounts. Holly berries are not very palatable but they have caused poisoning in animals.

Hogs, sheep, cattle, and goats are especially susceptible to poisoning from overdose of Morning Glory's hallucinogenic seeds.

To Look For Poisonous Plants — II

Chester Hughes, Lancaster County extension livestock agent, reports farmers need to make sure livestock do not come in contact with poisonous plants.

Ruminants may experience difficult breathing, elevated temperatures, monogastrics, and show anorexia and incoordination after eating bracken fern. Rhubarb toxicity symptoms include staggerings, excessive salivation, convulsions, and death.

Death may occur within a few hours following ingestion of wilted leaves of wild cherry. The entire yew plant contains poisonous alkaloids and survival of livestock after eating is rare.

All species of livestock have exhibited toxicosis from English ivy.

With the increasing number of new houses in rural areas, it is important all livestock farmers check their fields for these plants and explain to their neighbors the importance of not throwing yard and plant material in pastures and plant shrubs near fence lines.

To Check Tobacco Plants For Blue Mold

Weather conditions have been favorable for the movement of blue mold spores up the East Coast, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

Blue mold was first discovered in Florida March 22. Weather conditions during most of early April were favorable for the movement of blue mold northward.

Blue mold has been reported in Georgia, South Carolina, and North Carolina. Many recent storm fronts had the potential of moving blue mold spores from infected areas to Pennsylvania.

Several times the weather conditions in Pennsylvania were also favorable for blue mold development.

Overcast and rainy weather between May 19 and May 23 and Memorial Day weekend were ideal for the transportation and survival of blue mold spores, especially in plant beds and greenhouses.

Tobacco plants should be checked very carefully for the next several weeks for any sign of blue mold.

LETTING THE GLORY OUT!

Background Scripture:
Philippians 1:12-30.
Devotional Reading:
1 Peter 1:3-9.

We all like to win, don't we? If we can't do it personally, then we want to identify with a winner or winning team. I think there is too much emphasis upon winning today. I don't think that winning is the only thing.

Actually, real life is about both winning and losing. From the world's standpoint, the Apostle Paul was a winner and a loser. Paul is languishing in Roman imprisonment and we do not know whether he ever gained his freedom. Nevertheless, his letter tells us that Paul was not the loser in this episode. Even if he was put to death here, Paul was the winner because of his remarkable attitude.

For one thing, Paul saw his imprisonment as an opportunity: "I want you to know brethren that what has happened to me has really served to advance the gospel . . ." (12,13). According to stress research, being imprisoned is one of the most stressful of experiences because for most people it spells defeat and repudiation.

But Paul was elated in his imprisonment because he chose to look at his experience differently: his imprisonment was actually serving to make known the name and power of Jesus Christ.

You can't defeat a person who insists upon seeing the opportunities instead of the obstacles of life.

It Doesn't Matter

In what would have discouraged most others, Paul chose to see the bright instead of the dark side: ". . . most of the brethren have been made confident in the Lord . . . and are much more bold to speak the word of God without fear. Some indeed preach Christ from envy and rivalry, but others from good will."

Wouldn't that make you angry and resentful? But Paul cannot be defeated: "What then? Only that in every way, whether in pretense or truth, Christ is proclaimed; and in that I rejoice" (1:14-18). Paul may be facing execution. Wouldn't that pitch most of us into despair? But you can't defeat Paul with the "facts" because he knows there is something more than the facts. "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. If it is to be life in the flesh that means fruitful labor for me. Yet, which I choose I cannot tell" (1:21). If he lives he will win and if he dies he will win also, for he regards it as an opportunity: "Christ will be honored in my body by life or death" (1:20). How can you defeat a guy like that? He wins regardless of what you do.

It is not, however, because Paul is a winner in himself, but because he ties his life to God in Christ. If he were evaluating this on the basis of his own personal status, Paul would be a big loser. But Paul does not use personal gain as a yardstick. only the gospel of Jesus Christ. That is why he cannot be defeated — because God cannot be defeated.

In A Better Way

In Josephus Daniels' biography of Woodrow Wilson, he says: "Wilson never knew defeat, for defeat never comes to any man until he admits it.

"Do not trouble about things we have fought for," Wilson told a friend. "They are sure to prevail. They are only delayed. And I will make this concession to Providence — it may come in a better way than we suppose." For the Christian, defeat is only label for the short run. We do not have to have the victory, because ultimately God will have it and share it.

Edwin Markham wrote a poem, "Victory in Defeat," in which he says: "Defeat may serve as well as victory, To shake the soul and let the glory out."

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
May 26, 2000

Butter Prices Continue to Strengthen

-Grade AA butter reaches $1.37/lb

-Cheese market remains weay Q1 consumption up 4.4%

-June advance prices announced

The butter market continues to amaze analysts by showing significant price strength The cheese market, however, continues to languish below support levels The strength in the butter market has new significance under federal order reform since it not only affects the Class IV price, but also helps boost the Class I price as well Under the old system, the cheese price determined three out of four class prices So, this is good news for dairy farmers that ship milk to federal orders that have Class I and IV sales.

Prices for Grade AA butter at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange rose from $1 2650 per pound on Monday, May 22 to $1 27 on Wednesday, May 24 to $1 37 on Friday, May 26 Cream is priced as a multiple to butter prices. Higher butter prices have made cream more expensive. Ice cream makers have been gearing up production for summer demand and have been facing these higher cream prices At the same time, this is the time of year that butter processors buy cream to make butter So cream and butter are in hot demand Commercial stocks of butter in public warehouses were 106 million in April, down 15 9 percent from year ago levels

The cheese market continues to remain weak Barrel cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange remained flat at $1 0650 per pound, and 40-pound block cheese fell from $1 09 per pound to $1 0875 by weeks end During the week of May 18-26, the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) purchased 459,381 pounds of block cheese and 277,200 pounds of process cheese from Midwest sources under the dairy price support program The CCC also purchased 760,000 pounds of barrel cheese for July delivery under Invitation 627 at $0.0450 per pound over the Chicago Mercantile Exchange barrel price average

USDA published first quarter supply and demand estimates for milk and dairy products this week. For the period January -

Nutra-Flo FOLIAR PLANT FOOD ...the Yield Booster!

Completely Safe, Will Not Burn Plants

Nutra-Flo "foliar plant food" is completely safe for foliar application.

- made from 100% orthophosphate
- chloride-free
- 100% water soluble
- crystal clear, water-white liquid
- low-salt index
- neutral pH

Improves Soybean, Corn & Alfalfa Yields

Research shows foliar feeding boosts maturity, quality and yield. Plants get an immediate source of N-P-K when soil nutrients are unavailable. Large applications of nitrogen, high organic matter, high or low pH, dry conditions, excess moisture, extreme heat or cold can reduce macro or micronutrient availability.

CROP	BENEFITS OF FOLIAR PLANT FOOD	YIELD INCREASE
Soybeans	• Improves and increases pod set • Hastens maturity	Up to 12 bu/A
Corn	• Higher test weight • Drier corn at harvest	Up to 9 bu/A
Alfalfa	• Increased protein quality • Hastens maturity	Up to 4 ton/A

Easy to Apply with Post-Emerge Chemicals

Nutra-Flo foliar plant food can be piggy-backed with most insecticide and herbicide applications. It meets Monsanto's strict compatibility specifications for combining liquid N-P-K with Roundup® Ultra for application on Roundup Ready® soybeans.

Foliar Application Guidelines

CROP	FIRST APPLICATION	SECOND APPLICATION	AMOUNT FOR EACH APPLICATION
Soybeans	4th to 6th leaf trifoliate	60 to 80% pod set	3 to 6 gals/A
Corn	3 to 5 leaf collar	10 to 15 days before tassel	3 to 6 gals/A
Alfalfa	4 to 6 days after each cutting		3 to 6 gals/A

Lower Costs, Higher Yields

SAVE Up to 25%

Nutra-Flo foliar plant food costs less. You'll enjoy these other economic benefits when you foliar apply Nutra-Flo plant food:

- Higher profits
- High energy
- Faster maturity
- Drier crops at harvest
- Higher protein levels
- Better nutrient uptake
- Increased disease resistance
- More drought resistance
- Increased root growth
- No application costs when you combine with post-emerge chemicals

New Dairy Housing And Equipment Systems Proceedings Available

ITHACA, N.Y. — A new publication from the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service (NRAES) presents and documents guidelines for managing existing housing systems and planning new systems to improve profitability, reduce labor requirements, and improve cow comfort. This collection of 36 papers ($30.00 plus S&H/sales tax, 456 pages, February 2000) is the proceedings from the conference "Dairy Housing and Equipment Systems: Managing and Planning for Profitability," held February 1-3, 2000; in Camp Hill, Pennsylvania.

Dairy Housing and Equipment Systems: Managing and Planning for Profitability, NRAES-129, includes 36 papers divided into eight categories. The first section on cow comfort, decisions, and management presents papers on facilities; capital investments; cow comfort, fear, and productivity; and producer satisfaction with expansion decisions.

The next group of five papers reviews planning new facilities: site evaluation and selection, farmstead layout, freestall barn layouts, responsibilities in constructing new facilities, and growing a staff. Five presentations on system management discuss evaluating and improving existing dairy systems, biosecurity, lighting, photoperiod management, and putting money where it matters.

The next four papers on environmental control for cow comfort explain natural ventilation systems, systems controls, heat stress relief and supplemental cooling, and tunnel ventilation.

The topics of freestall troubleshooting, design, and management encompass the next five papers, including a paper on sand for bedding. The section on facilities management and health includes three papers on bedding's contribution to mastitis, environmental risk factors contributing to lameness, and flooring. The next three presentations discuss the design of the feed area and water space, feedbunk management, and the impact of head gates and overcrowding on production.

The final section of this publication includes papers on defining and managing special cows, facility design and case studies for the transition cow, plastic and fabric covered arch-frame buildings, restraint and treatment facilities and equipment, and sort gates.

Dairy Housing and Equipment Systems: Managing and Planning for Profitability, NRAES-129, is available for $30.00 per copy, plus shipping and handling and sales tax, from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. The shipping and handling charge is $5.50 for a single copy within the continental United States. DFA And NZBD Announce DairiConcepts Joint Venture

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) and the New Zealand Dairy Board (NZDB) have announced the formation of a new joint venture, DairiConcepts, L.P. (DairiConcepts), which will manufacture and market cheese and dairy ingredients for sophisticated applications in the food processing industry.

Named to reflect the company's emphasis on innovation, DairiConcepts is a limited partnership with equal DFA and NZDB ownership and management. The new company will combine the resources of NZDB's cheese technology and ingredients company, NZMP Key Ingredients, and the manufacturing and marketing resources of DFA.

DFA President and Chief Executive Officer Gary Hanman spoke of the new venture as a "key strategic move" that allows both organizations to advance more quickly and share in the growth opportunities of this expanding market segment.

"This relationship is a good fit. DFA has the manufacturing power. NZDB and Key Ingredients have an established, worldwide reputation for superior technology in the development of intense-flavored cheese ingredients, seasoning blends, enzyme modified cheeses and other dairy-based ingredients," said Hanman.

DairiConcepts will initially market established product lines, but will soon offer new types of ingredients coming from its expanded research and development operations. NZDB Chief Executive, Warren Larsen, said that the arrangement enhances both organizations' global market opportunities. "There are clear benefits for farmer shareholders both in the United States and New Zealand," he said.

John Weidner, former vice president of operations for DFA's formulated business, will serve as president and chief operating office of the new limited partnership Headquarters for DairiConcepts will be in Springfield, Missouri with additional sales and service offices in Hummelstown, Pennsylvania and production facilities located at Hummelstown and at sites throughout the Midwestern United States.

The NZDB is the marketing arm of the New Zealand dairy industry. The Board's main business is separated into consumer, foodservice and ingredients sales.

Free Trade With China Will Mean Bright Future

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The following statement was issued by National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) President Lynn Jensen of Lake Preston, S.D. following the recent 237-197 House vote in favor of permanent normal trade relations for China:

"From Wal-Mart to Pottery Barn, Americans can already buy 'Made in China' products. Now, 1.28 billion Chinese people will get a chance to taste American agriculture, from corn and corn products to soybeans, wheat, meat, poultry and dairy.

"Today's House vote was a vote in favor of opportunity — for U.S. farmers and for the people of China. The nation's corn growers are gratified that a majority of House members heeded agriculture's message and voted to give us open access to the world's largest market, rather than pandering to the protectionists who refuse to recognize that we operate in a global economy.

"As corn growers said in the fortune cookies we distributed on Capitol Hill this week: 'free trade with China will mean a bright future for U.S. farmers."

National Organic Standards Board To Meet

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA's National Organic Standards Board (NOSB) will meet June 6-7 at the Hilton Crystal City, 2399 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, Va., from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. The meeting is open to the public.

"At this meeting the NOSB will receive committee reports, approve the NOSB's comment to the re-proposed National Organic Program regulation, vote on whether to recommend the addition of ethylene gas and amino acids to the National List, elect new officers of the NOSB, and receive an update regarding certification of aquatic animals from the USDA," said Kathleen Merrigan, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

Time has been scheduled for public comment on June 6, 1:30 p.m.-4 p.m. Those wishing to provide written or oral comments to the board on any organic issue should send requests to Toni Strother, USDA-AMS-TMP-NOP, Room 2510-So., Ag Stop 0268, P.O. The NOSB, which grew out of the Organic Foods Production Act of 1990, met for the first time in March 1992. It has six committees addressing issues related to crop standards, processing, labeling and packaging standards, livestock standards, accreditation, materials, and international trade.

On March 13, 2000, USDA published its re-proposed National Organic Program regulations. Comments are being accepted until June 12, 2000. Comments may be submitted to Keith Jones, Program Manager, National Organic Program, USDA-AMS-TMP-NOP, Room 2945-So., Ag Stop 0275, PO Box 96456, Washington, DC 20090-6456. Red And White Dairy Cattle Association Announces Annual Convention Details

CRYSTAL SPRING (Bedford Co.) — The Red and White Dairy Cattle Association (RWDCA) recently announced its 2000 Annual Convention schedule and highlights, to be held July 27-29 in Bedford, Pennsylvania. Hosted by the Mason-Dixon RWDCA, the 2000 Convention marks the first convention of the millennium — and the first Convention of the RWDCA ever held in the Eastern states.

Within the recently released April issue of the Association's publication, The Red Bloodlines, the convention plans and a preliminary schedule of events was posted as follows:

Wednesday, July 26

•Noon — National Board Meeting

Thursday, July 27

•9-11:30 a.m. — Tour to National Office

•1:30-4:30 p.m. — Tour to Burket Falls Farm

Friday, July 28

•10 a.m. — Mason-Dixon Spectacular Show (includes Junior Show)

•5 p.m. — Annual RWDCA Membership Meeting

•6 p.m. — Hospitality (hosted by The Cattle Exchange)

•7 p.m. — Awards Banquet

•8 p.m. — Fun Auction

Saturday, July 29

•10:30 a.m. — Elite Red Sale 2000

For many members, this is an opportunity to visit the national office, notes John Carpenter of the Association office. The office is located just 45 minutes east of Bedford. A tour to Burket Falls Farm also adds excitement to the program. Burket Falls Farms, just 30 minutes north of Bedford, has been known for many years as leaders in breeding elite Red cattle and are pioneers in the breeding of polled dairy genetics.

Opportunities for elite genetics will be strong, as the Elite Red Sale 2000 will offer leading genetics predicted to be the best in the history of the breed. While consignments are still being finalized, early commitments to this historic sale include an Excellent All-American from the Blackcrest Kay family, a polled red-carrier sired by Aero Bond from Burket Falls' foundation Sophia family, two exciting daughters from the well-known Mo-Red cow from K-Jo Holsteins, a Very Good-87 daughter by Lyon-Red from Jurbala & Hock, members of the Tina Lee family from Del-Hollow Farm, a deep-pedigreed Rubens from Gloryland, a high-protein Neyer daughter from a super Celsius daughter, and a special, early Mario daughter from the Scarlet family consigned by Ja-Bob Holsteins. Additional, exciting consignments will be announced shortly.

Bedford is an area rich in historic attractions, including Old Bedford Village (an operating pioneer village), Fort Bedford and the Fort Bedford Museum. In addition, there are numerous historic buildings throughout downtown. Located in the scenic Appalachian Mountains, the county is also home of many natural attractions and an amazing 14 covered bridges.

Bedford is located in South-central Pennsylvania on the Pennsylvania Turnpike (I-76). Route 30 and I-99 also pass through Bedford. Both the show and sale will be held at the Bedford County Fairgrounds, with the convention headquarters, meeting and banquet being held at the Best Western Bedford Inn.

The Red and White Dair, Cattle Association was founded in 1964 to promote the breeding and development of Red and White dairy cattle and has been located in Crystal Springs, Pennsylvania since 1988. The Association is based on the principle of an open herdbook. There are now over 110,000 animals registered in the herdbook and 800 members in the Association.

ADADC Maximizes Promotion Dollars By Teaming Up With MilkPEP

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — By teaming up with the processor promotion group, MilkPEP, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) was able to extend promotional activities in local markets and create a win-win situation for dairy farmers, processors, and consumers.

This spring, ADADC was on hand when the Milk Mustache college tour came to Kings' College in Wilkes-Barre. To extend media opportunities, ADADC arranged for a Kings' College athletic trainer to be interviewed on WBRE (NBC) morning news to promote the event and discuss the calcium crisis in America. ADADC publicity staff also chatted on-air with DJ's from two of the area's most popular radio stations, the Cat Country and WBHT, to encourage consumers to come down to the event and learn more about the health benefits of milk.

WBRE-TV also captured the event for both the 5:00 p.m. and 11:00 p.m. newscasts, and the story was featured in the Times Herald, the areas largest daily newspaper, the following day. More than 200 consumers posed with milk mustaches for the chance to be featured in an upcoming issue of Rolling Stone Magazine. For more information on the college tour, visit www.whymilk.com.

First Union National Bank believes "The Family Farm is the Backbone of Agriculture." On behalf of all dairy farmers, we are pleased to salute the success of Skull Hill Farm in Berks County, PA. The Zimmerman family of Berks County, sitting before their newly constructed 390 cow facility, have been in the dairy business beginning with Charles' grandparents nearly 70 years ago. The original farm was passed to Charles' father Larry and his uncle Mark. Charles and Linda purchased the farm from his parents, Larry and Marilyn, in 1987. The Zimmermans currently farm 900 acres and milk 350 cows, three times a day. Charles is responsible for the cow management; Linda is responsible for the accounting; Charles, Jr. does the feeding and field work; Larry does the field work; and Ashley works with the calves and breeding. Along with the family, they have four part-time employees for whom they are thankful.

A SALUTE TO DAIRY FARMERS. EVERY MONTH IS DAIRY MONTH WITH US.

June is National Dairy Month and at First Union Bank we feel you deserve credit more than one month out of the year.

Managing a successful dairy operation requires working capital year round. We're here to help you meet your financial needs.

Farmland Preservation Options In Lancaster County

In Lancaster County, preservation efforts are strong with the combined efforts of the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board and the Lancaster Farmland Trust. Together the two preservation organizations have preserved 402 farms and more than 33,900 acres. As Lancaster County's population continues to grow, one of the two fastest growing counties in the state, farmers will continue to face more and more development pressure. When thinking about the decision to preserve your farm, you may be confused about which organization to use, although both have a central goal to preserve as much prime farmland as possible. The following is a comparison of the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board and the Lancaster Farmland Trust.

The Lancaster Ag Preserve Board is a Public (County) Agency with their Board serving as their advisory body to the County Commissioners. The Lancaster Farmland Trust is an independent, non-profit organization (501 (c)(3) tax status), which is an important consideration for Amish and other Plain Sects The Ag Preserve Board uses County appropriated funds from the general fund and bonds, state appropriated funds, and limited federal funds to purchase easements at full-appraised value (average price paid per acre is $2000) The Farmland Trust uses private donations, grants, and memberships for its funding No government funding is sought or accepted Most easements are donated or purchased at a "bargain sale" (average price paid per acre is $490) The Ag Preserve Board has preserved 292 farms since 1980, which is a total of 26,769 acres with 50 farms expected in 2000 The Farmland Trust has preserved 110 farms since 1988, which is a total of 7,163 acres with 15 farms expected in 2000

The waiting period when preserving your farm through the Ag Preserve Board is uncertain All applications must be re-ranked yearly Depending on soil quality, development pressure and other criteria, the waiting period could be brief or extend for several years Preserving your farm through the Farmland Trust takes very little time when the easement is donated or a low easement price is paid Otherwise the waiting period is dependent on the availability of funds.

Farms within Urban Growth Boundaries generally are not preserved by either organization. The Ag Preserve Board requires farms to be zoned agriculture and be in designated Agricultural Security Areas. Township officials designate ASA's, which need to be at least 500 acres in size for preservation. The Farmland Trust does not require your farm to be in an ASA. With regard to intensive animal agriculture, the Ag Preserve Board has no limitations other than a required conservation and nutrient management plan. With the Farmland Trust, limitations on intensive animal agriculture are only at the request of the landowner and the Trust encourages conservation and nutrient management plans.

The Ag Preserve Board generally limits the farm to one additional house per farm. With the Farmland Trust, generally they limit one house per 25 acres. When your farm is preserved the taxable estate is normally reduced by the easement value. Depending on the property's original basis, some or all funds received may be subject to income tax, although a "like-kind exchange" may be used. The greater the donation of your easement, the greater the potential income tax deduction.The flexibility of the Ag Preserve Board is somewhat limited because it is a government agency. September 1st is the yearly application deadline and currently more than 150 farms are awaiting funds. The Farmland Trust can often respond at once to landowner's unique needs because of its private affiliation and funding process.

For more information on the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board, call (717) 299-8355 and ask for June Mengal, director. To reach the Lancaster Farmland Trust call (717) 293-0707 and ask for Tom Stouffer, president. Many of the agricultural counties across PA have a County Ag Preserve Board. Other preservation organizations similar to the Lancaster Farmland Trust are the Berks County Conservancy, the Brandywine Conservancy in Chester County, and the Farm and Natural Lands Trust of York County.

Celebrate June as National Dairy Month during Family Dairy Days at Oregon Dairy, June 13-15 from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. With over 8,000 people expected, this event extends the opportunity for our non-farm neighbors to learn more about today's modern dairy farm. Enjoy this free event sponsored by The Lancaster Chamber. Please send your questions or comments about Farmland Preservation or Family Dairy Days to Brent Landis at The Lancaster Chamber at blandis@lcci.com or 717-397-3531.

Maryland Dairy Group Disputes Environmentalists Call For A Moratorium On Large Farming Operations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Maryland Dairy Industry Association (MDIA) has contacted state lawmakers in Annapolis to register its opposition to the Sierra Club's recent call for a moratorium on large-scale farm operations.

The Sierra Club, an environmental and wilderness protection group, launched advertisements in several Maryland media markets as part of a $8 million national ad campaign to cap the size of "corporate farms." The ads also denounce the use of plant and animal standardization through "genetic manipulation."

"The Sierra Club stands for some worthy causes, but they are terribly misinformed on this issue," said MDIA President Myron Wilhide of Detour, MD.

"This latest assault on sustainable agriculture does nothing to recognize the daily contributions that agriculture makes to Maryland's economy. This includes not only producers and the seed and equipment dealers that supply them, but retail outlets, as well. Take away farmland and you can bet those open spaces will suddenly become ripe for development. Placing growth restrictions on producers is nothing short of un-American."

Sierra Club media spots targeting Hagerstown, Salisbury, Westminister, and other rural media markets urge Maryland Governor Glendening and state lawmakers to place moratoriums on the construction or expansion of large-scale farms. MDIA, as well as most members of the General Assembly, are on record in opposition to this cap.

"MDIA welcomes innovative methods to create a cooperative balance between producer efficiency, profitability, and the preservation of our natural resources," said Wilhide. "MDIA's most recent commitment to environmental safety stems from our efforts to ensure producer input with the state's nutrient management regulations. What we cannot abide by are unwarranted attacks, leveled without any credible scientific merit, which seek to dismantle one of the foundations of our national economy."

"In Maryland, most of these so-called "corporate" farms the ads refer to actually consist of relatives combining individual operations to form a larger entity. Without these large-scale producers, many of whom are dedicated land preservationists, the diversity and productivity of our agricultural economy would be in jeopardy. Let's not become captive to a media blitz predicated upon counter-productive rhetoric," he said.

MDIA urges its members and other agricultural producers, processors, and retailers to voice their objections on the moratorium issue by contacting Governor Parris Glendening's office toll-free at 1/800-811-8336. For additional information on MDIA's position, please contact their administrative office in Washington, D.C. at 202/293-0476.

Genetic Marketing Provides Extra Income For Fleetwood Dairyman

Seen here with son Andy, Jim attributes most of his success to the Rich-Ru Tesk Melinda family of cows he purchased from his neighbors Dean and Dale Smith. Good sound cows with fantastic udders, the Melinda family has given Jim the opportunity to market offspring to A.I. companies and high pedigree farms all over the world.

they could, but it was up to me to pay for it and make it work."

Make it work they did. The first step was renovating the 30-cow barn into a 60-cow tie stall barn. With the help of their parents and a neighbor, Tim and Sue did most of the work on the barn. After it was set up, they needed to purchase their herd.

"I purchased my first heifer when I was 12, so I had a herd of cows at my dad's," said Younkers. "But I didn't want to take them all out of his herd at the same time. I let them dry off at my dad's and gradually brought them over here to calve in."

Instead, Younkers purchased a 60-cow grade herd from a neighbor who was selling out. "I never thought I would buy that kind of herd," he said. "But it was the best thing that ever happened to me. I bought the herd, which was averaging 22 pounds a day, for butcher price, doubled the herd average in two weeks, and got started at a lot lower cost than if I would have bought all registered."

Although Younkers still has some of those original grade cows, his herd is now about 75 percent registered. Most of his grade cattle carry embryos from his registered animals.

The herd averages 25,400 pounds of milk with 886 pounds fat and 825 pounds protein. With 27 very goods in his herd, Younkers' Breed Adjustment Average is 106.7.

Younkers has capitalized on that B.A.A. and marketed offspring from his herd to high pedigree farms and A.I. companies throughout the United States and beyond. He got his first taste of genetic marketing while his herd was still at his dad's farm.

"We were lucky that we had a cow --Plushanski Mark Oriya -- that did really well for us," said Younkers. "It brought a lot of people to my parents' farm from all over the world, including France, Japan, and England. That really got me started in the business."

Since then, Younkers has purchased several other high pedigreed animals, some that went on to great success and others that didn't turn out. But it was the Rich-Ru Tesk Melinda family that really put Kirbyville Holsteins on the map.

"Six months after I started, I got my first animals from the Melinda family," said Younkers. "I started out with six and then got four more later."

Younkers acquired the Melinda family from Dean and Dale Smith of Richard Smith and Sons. "The barn was full, and they wanted to sell the cows to someone who could really market their potential," he said.

Today the Melinda family is internationally known for its excellent udders and good, solid frames. "I give the Smiths a lot of credit," said Younkers. "The cows were in a commercial freestall operation. The Smiths registered, tested, and scored the animals. They definitely had the cow power there, but not much was going on in the genetic marketing end."

Acquiring the Melinda family gave Younkers the opportunity to merchandise that particular family, as well as the rest of his herd. "I never really counted on creating such a marketing interest with her," said Younkers. "I was just hoping to make a little money off of her."

Since the Melinda family came to Kirbyville, Younkers has sold more than 100 embryos and has exported them around the world. Although he has had success with other animals in his herd, the Melinda family has really overshadowed anything else he's had.

People from all over the world have come to visit Kirbyville Holsteins to see the high pedigree animals in the Younkers herd. In fact, the Prime Minister of Denmark was at the farm last year while on a tour of the area.

"We didn't realize it was that big of deal until we saw the Reading Eagle and other people covering the event," said Younkers.

A member of the Berks County Holstein Club board, Younkers is very active in the marketing arena. "I'm always studying genetics," he said. "But success in marketing depends a lot on the luck of having the right cows at the right time."

Over the years, Younkers has purchased different animals just to bring traffic into his farm. "The main thing in marketing is to get people to your farm," he said. "If they don't see the cows, they're not going to buy them."

He also advertises his herd through Holstein World and Pennsylvania Profiles. He is a regular consigner at Holstein sales throughout the state.

"Word of month is probably my best seller," said Younkers. "Enough people have seen my cows, so we merchandise a lot of animals privately."

According to his wife, Susan, who helps milk the cows, Jim spends most of his evenings talking on the phone. In December 1999, Susan quit her full-time job as a secretary for GPU Electric to help full-time on the farm and raise their two children, Andy, 5, and Joel, 2.

"Most nights Jim comes in from the barn and gets on the telephone talking to different people about his cows," said Susan.

"You don't get any dumber by talking to them," said Jim. "People need to know who you are and where you are to buy your cattle."

According to Younkers, the dollar value of genetics varies from year to year. "It's a cash flow business," he said. "It's great when your milk check is low. A bull check really helps carry things along."

But, for Younkers, genetics isn't all profit. "There's a lot of expense in embryo transfer work," he said. "If you can't sell the embryos or bulls, it probably doesn't pay because it is so expensive."

One way Younkers keeps cost down is by transferring his own embryos. "Bill Pettit from Huff & Puff Embryos does my flushing, and he taught me how to do transfers," said Jim. "It isn't a whole lot different from breeding cows."

Younkers doesn't flush any animals that he doesn't have a contract on. "If you can't sell the embryos, it's not worth the cost."

He claims that successful genetic marketing has a lot to do with luck, skill, knowledge, and knowing when to let a good cow go.

"Somebody once told me that the last thing you want to do is be the owner of a cow when she dies," said Younkers. "You have to price her reasonably because the next guy only wants to buy if he thinks he can make money off of her."

Although genetic marketing does add extra to his bottom line, Younkers still depends most on his milk check. "Milk is my number one source of income -- it's what I base everything else off of.

"ET marketing gives me a little extra that I can use to do stuff on my farm," he said. "But if you have to start using ET profits to supplement the milk check, then you wonder if it is really worth it.

"We've been really fortunate here," said Younkers. "I owe a lot of credit to a lot of different people. My parents have been really supportive. I use my dad's equipment to farm our land, which helps cut costs. And my mom helps milk in the mornings. We feel really lucky to be able to live the life we've always wanted.

Genetic Marketing Dollars & Sense

Putting a profit value on genetic marketing is difficult.

According to Ken Raney, executive director for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, profit from one flush can range from the negative numbers to significant dollars.

"Embryo transfer work isn't always gravy," said Raney. "If the cow you're flushing doesn't make anything, you still have all of the cost wrapped into it. And you have to try again."

Embryos resulting from one flush can range anywhere from 0 to 40. "Most guys hope for at least four to five embryos per flush," said Raney.

Costs involved with flushing include $150 per embryo for flushing, $50 to $100 for freezing and transfer work, and around $100 for semen costs.

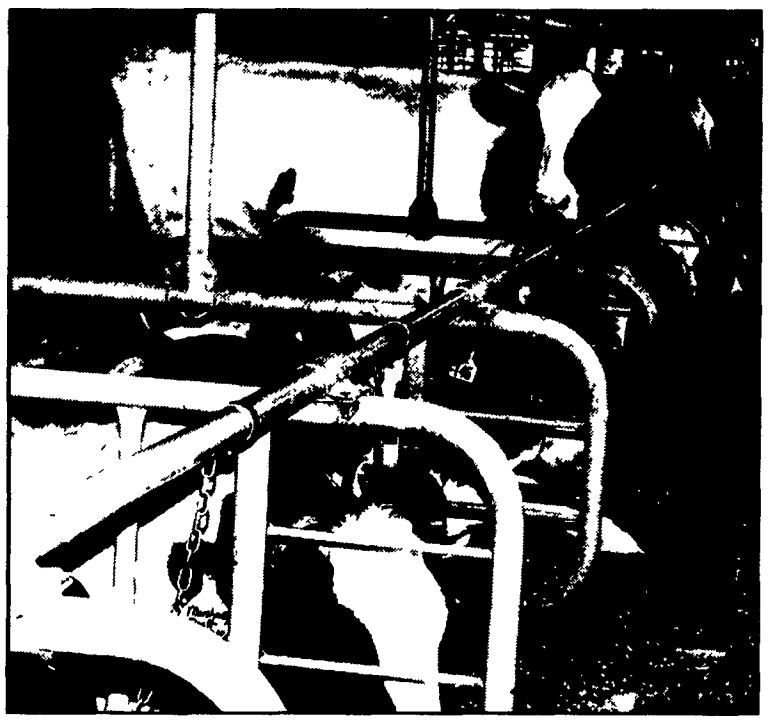
You can sell an embryo for anywhere from $150 to $1,800. A.I. companies contract bulls for anywhere from $3,500 to $5,000.

"If you have a cow that really produces, you can get a couple of embryos to sell, a couple of heifers, and may get a bull to contract," said Raney. "So you make up your cost and then some."

According to Raney, the scope of the genetic marketing is very broad. "There are all kinds of buyers out there," said Raney. "Some are buying high index cows, and some are looking for the top show cows."

So, as Jim Younkers said, genetic marketing takes skill, knowledge, and a lot of luck.

"And a good cow is defined by the buyer," said Raney.



Although Jim claims that there's luck involved in genetic marketing, it also requires a lot of skill. According to Jim, the first step in successfully marketing your cattle is getting people to visit your farm.

Bradford County Trends

try in 1990, 1995, and 2000 by number of dairy cows, number of herds, DHI herd average, and average herd size.

In 1990: 38,000 cows, 660 herds, 16,459 pounds milk, and 57.4 cows.

In 1995: 32,000 cows, 520 herds, 18,098 pounds milk, and 59.6 cows.

In 2000: 30,600 cows, 460 herds, 18,858 pounds milk, and 66.3 cows.

As you will notice from this chart, cow numbers and total herds have shown a continual decline over the past 10 years. One interesting trend during this same 10-year period, or more accurately, a lack of a major trend is in herd size. Yes, average herd size has grown, but not at as drastic a rate as we have seen in other major dairy areas of the country.

What are the major trends and changes that are occurring in today's Bradford County Dairy Industry? As I see them, they are as follows:

✔ A new accelerated move by some dairy farm operators toward major expansions (150-600 cows).

✔ A move by some dairy farm operators toward a grass based (intensive pasture management) system of feeding dairy cows and heifers.

✔ A move by some dairy farm operators toward specialization (especially contract heifer raising and contract forage harvesting).

✔ A move by some dairy farm operators to partially use all of the trends listed above; increasing herd size slowly, use some specialized contracting, and adjusting their feeding systems toward the use of Total Mixed Rations and/or utilizing pastures to maximize dry matter opportunities.

Because of the large amount of reasonably priced farm land, potential grazing land, and large acreage to spread manure and be in compliance with Nutrient Management Act guidelines, Bradford County will continue to be a major dairy area in Pennsylvania with at least the potential of growth in tomorrow's dairy industry.

Teachers Go To School To Learn IPM

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Responding to proposed K-12 academic standards that call for integrated pest management (IPM) to be taught as part of units on the environment and ecology, the Pennsylvania IPM Program is offering a course to help teachers incorporate IPM into their curriculum.

IPM aims to control pests — such as insects, diseases, weeds and animals — by combining physical, biological and chemical tactics that are safe, profitable and environmentally compatible.

The class, "IPM for Teachers K-12: Meeting New Academic Standards," (ENT 497D) will be June 28-30 at Penn State's University Park campus.

"The course will provide the basis for teaching IPM concepts in the classroom, as well as indoor and outdoor activities to demonstrate real-world pest management decision-making skills," said Lyn Garling, education specialist with the Pennsylvania IPM Program at Penn State. "Participants will leave with IPM collection kits, a large notebook, posters, resource lists and several books and 4-H activity guides that will help them understand the concepts involved in IPM."

"IPM combines information about pest identity, biology, and population growth with the use of multiple tactics to prevent or manage pest problems if necessary," said Garling. "IPM activities are well suited for hands-on learning that cuts across the curriculum, from biology, chemistry, and ecology to math and statistics."

Garling will team-teach the course with Kerry Richards of Penn State's Pesticide Education Program. For more information, contact Garling (phone 814-863-8884 or e-mail ljg5@psu.edu) or Richards (phone 814-865-2134 or e-mail kmh14@psu.edu).

Milking Parlor Development Workshop For Dairy Grazers

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.) — A day-long workshop for farmers and landowners on the design and construction of milking parlors suitable for dairy grazers will be held at Cove Mt. Farm in Mercersburg, PA on Thursday, June 22.

The focus of the workshop will be on herringbone "swing" parlors, a design used widely in New Zealand and also by many dairy grazers here in the U.S. Swing parlors can be a lower cost alternative for dairy farmers who might not have the resources for a conventional parlor development. They are extremely efficient and capable of milking a large number of cows very quickly.

The featured speaker will be Vance Haugen from the University of Wisconsin extension. Haugen has worked extensively with dairy farmers in Wisconsin to plan and build swing parlors, often installing them in older stanchion barns.

Other speakers will be Dean Bell from Waikato Milking Systems; Doug Parker, grazing consultant from Williston, Vermont; and Ron Geck, a dairy farmer from Cambridge, New Zealand.

Glenn Moyer, Dave Rice, Duane Hertzler, and Phil Risser — farmers who have built swing parlors in the last two years — will participate in a panel discussion to share their insights on parlor development.

The program will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Participants are invited to stay after the workshop for afternoon milking in Cove Mt. Farm's 16-unit swing parlor at 4 p.m.

Advance registration for the workshop is not required; however, box lunches will be available only to those who call prior to June 20.

Cost for lunch is $5 per person, payable the day of the workshop. Workshop sponsors include American Farmland Trust, Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture, USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service, and Franklin County Graziers.

For more information or to reserve a box lunch, call (717) 328-4400. Cove Mt. Farm is located on Rt. 456 in Franklin County, nine miles south of Rt. 16. The farm is just seven miles north of Rt. 70 and the Maryland state line. From Rt. 70, take exit 5, head north on Hollow Rd. and turn right on Rt. 456 once you've crossed into Pennsylvania.

For more information on Cove Mt. Farm, visit the American Farmland Trust's website on grass-based farming systems at http://grassfarmer.com

USDA Requests Changes To Railroad Merger Regulations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On May 16, the USDA filed comments before the Surface Transportation Board (STB) regarding proposed changes to its regulations governing major railroad mergers.

STB has requested public comment since it believes the current regulations no longer adequately protect the public interest. The comments address those issues most related to USDA's mandate and expertise, such as downstream effects, safeguarding rail service, promoting and enhancing competition, short line and regional railroads issues, merger-related public interest benefits, and cross-border issues.

"In 1999, American farmers produced more than 16 billion bushels of grain and oilseeds. Agricultural shippers pay more than $3.5 billion annually in freight costs to U.S. railroads to transport agricultural products. Nearly half of all grain produced in the U.S. moves to market by rail," said Michael V. Dunn, undersecretary for USDA's marketing and regulatory programs. "Therefore, the issue of rail mergers is a matter of great concern."

USDA has made these 10 recommendations designed to protect the interests of agricultural producers, shippers, and rural communities:

1. The STB incorporate possible downstream and crossover effects of all future major railroad mergers upon the railroad industry, other railroad firms, other transportation modes, shippers, and communities into its revised merger guidelines.

2. The STB institute a rebuttable presumption against future major railroad mergers unless the merging railroads come up with a plan that mitigates any adverse consequences of the merger upon shippers and other railroad firms, prove the existence of merger-related benefits, and demonstrate that those benefits cannot be achieved by other means short of merger.

3. The STB require that railroads involved in major railroad consolidations indemnify shippers and other railroads during the merger implementation period for costs incurred because of merger-related service interruptions and require binding arbitration of all claims which the consolidated railroad disputes.

4. The STB continue to consider the ability of the merged firm to make the necessary infrastructure improvements before approving any major rail consolidation.

5. The STB, before approving any future major railroad consolidations, require the railroads involved to offer specific proposals to enhance competition and to mitigate any adverse competitive consequences of the consolidation upon shippers.

6. The STB, in approving further major railroad mergers, require the merging railroads to keep all existing rail gateways open.

7. The STB carefully analyze the impacts of future major railroad consolidations upon short line and regional railroads since significant quantities of grain and food products originate or terminate on these smaller railroads and because of the damages that diversion to truck transportation causes to the rural road infrastructure.

8. The STB examine more closely merger applicants' estimates of the synergies and other public interest benefits when balancing the benefits of proposed major railroad mergers against societal costs.

9. The STB consider the effects that different commercial and regulatory regimes between two countries can have upon cross-border trade and the potential international beneficiaries of a proposed transnational rail merger.

10. The STB, when considering major transnational rail mergers or combinations, analyze the effect of a foreign government's jurisdiction on the rail operations of the resulting railroad and the influence of the Canadian Wheat Board, particularly on the distribution of railcar capacity among U.S. and Canadian agricultural shippers which could have impacts in world markets.

Volatile Year For Dairy Industry

Then, once farmers made it through the drought, the crash came. In November, milk prices fell significantly. And in January, milk prices were reported at a 22-year low with the BFP price at below $10 per hundredweight.

Farmers are still reeling from the low milk prices. Some Pennsylvania producers banded together to picket dairies and call for help from legislators. Others pressed for a new pricing system.

At the same time, federal order reform took place, merging 31 orders into 11. Some things that came along with the federal order reform were multiple component pricing, prices based on the NASS survey, and the elimination of the BFP price.

"We're still trying to figure out the impact of the order reform," said Bailey. "We know that prices are lower now than they were last year. But most of it is due to the increased cheese stocks. The question is if any of it is due to order reform."

Pennsylvania farmers did get some relief from the low milk prices through the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board's over-order premium paid on all Class I milk produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania.

Earlier this spring, the PMMB Board voted to add a 25 cent temporary increase to the premium to counteract high diesel fuel prices. Currently the Board is reviewing testimony to renew the premium for the next six months.

The federal milk support price was also reported to have helped the low milk price situation. Data showed that without the support price, milk prices could have been much lower than what they were this spring.

Price forecasts for the remainder of this year are very conservative because national milk production continues to surpass last year's levels. With the current low feed costs, farmers have continued incentive to expand, increasing production levels.

In April, milk production in the 20 major states totaled 12.4 billion pounds, up 3.7 percent. In Pennsylvania, April milk production was up 2.9 percent.

On a positive note, dairy demand continues to increase. In the USDA first quarter report, commercial disappearance was up 4.4 percent on a milkfat basis.

Butter consumption was up 6.4 percent, American cheese consumption was up 3.5 percent, and other cheese consumption was up 8.5 percent. Nonfat dry milk consumption was down 21.9 percent.

With the past year having so many ups and downs, farmers are starting to consider options to protect their bottom line. Forward contracting and hedging can level out some of the highs and lows.

Niche marketing, such as producing organic milk, grazing cattle, marketing dairy genetics, and on-farm milk processing, can also increase the bottom line.

Farmers are also encouraged to have a business plan and know their cost of production to help prepare for the highs and lows of producing milk.

Whatever strategy they choose, one thing is for certain. After a year like this past one, dairy farmers need to be more prepared than ever to face the challenges of a volatile market.

Good Attitude Critical In Making Dairy Profitable

Carolyn N. Moyer
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) - On Lottahill Farm, nestled in the Endless Mountains of Bradford County, the Beardslee family is ready to take on the challenges of the future. In fact, they are in the process of studying ways to ensure that their dairy survives well into this Century.

Currently, Roy and Barbara operate the family farm in partnership with their son and daughter-in-law, Tim and Cathy.

The farm has been in the family since the mid 1800s and was originally settled by Roy's great grandfather. Roy took over the operation in the 1960s, when his father phased out of the operation, and Tim officially became a partner in 1978. Now the two families own a total of 800 acres with 500 acres of tillable ground. Much of their tillable acreage is rented from others.

Their total Holstein herd numbers 340 head with 184 milking animals. The herd, with a average milk production of 19,500 pounds, consists mostly of registered animals. Tim maintains a balanced breeding program with emphasis on udders and feet

"I don't mind using high milk bulls as long as they have the type I want," said Tim. "I don't use a lot of minus bulls on fat and protein. I just try to stay balanced."

Although the Beardslees are only in the early stages of expansion planning, they have already spent a considerable amount of time pushing a pencil to see how things would turn out.

"We're either going to have to do a major remodel here or we're going to have to expand. We're way over capacity right now," said Roy.

About two years ago the Beardslees met with a consultant to explore possible roads for the future, but decided against expansion at that time.

"It looked like too big of a project for just Tim and I," said Roy.

Now they are again working with a consultant and they've enlisted a neighbor who is also thinking about making a change. Partial funding for the consultant's fee was obtained through a program run by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders.

Tim, Cathy, Barbara and Roy Beardslee say that the bottom line in milk production is pounds of milk, fat and protein from the tank. Currently the Beardslees are considering expanding their dairy operation from 184 milking animals to 400.

When he's not in the fields, Roy Beardslee spends time in his office which is carved out of a corner of the garage. Here he can manage the day-to-day operations of the farm.

"It's going to be good for both of us whether we do it or whether one of us does it, or whether neither one of us does it. It's a good process to go through," said Roy.

With the consultant, they evaluate different scenarios and then examine the cash flow and the other specifics like labor, feed needs and nutrient management requirements.

"We've gone through 300 cows and we changed the method a little bit and went to went to 350 milking cows and now we're at 450 milking. It's sort of fitting the operation to make the cash flow," explained Roy.

The Beardslees are also aware of pending environmental regulations that they want to meet, especially since they are located so close to a state park.

"We have been to a farm in Chambersburg which has about 300 cows. He composts his solids and pumps the liquid. He can handle the liquid on about 40 acres right now and meets all of his nutrient management plan requirements, and he's right in the middle of Chambersburg where odor is a big concern for him. We're looking at that as a model."

Change is not new to the family. Even though the farm has always been a dairy operation, the numbers of cows has increased over the years, as has the setup of the operation. In 1978, the milking barn was consumed by fire, forcing them to build a new structure. They were, however, able to save all of the animals.

"Right after the fire, we moved our cows to a neighbor's farm and we built back. As we look back at it, we would have sold the cows immediately and focused on building," said Roy.

They reason that if they hadn't been distracted by the day-to-day care of the cows, they would have spent more time looking at other operations before building their present double six herringbone parlor and freestall barn.

"We lost a lot of money in production and we couldn't properly care for the cows, even though everyone involved did the best they could," said Roy.

"As we look back on it, we probably could have done a better job of building if we had sold our cows and focused on that. We may have not built there, we may have built someplace else. That's just something that if somebody had a fire now, they ought to consider, because it takes a lot of time to build."

The fire was in August and the Beardslees were back in the new barn in December.

The Beardslee Family also weathered two milk company bankruptcies over the years. They are now members of the North Penn Bulk Producers Association and sell their milk to Parmalat.

"It's never easy," said Roy, "But you go through it and you survive."

Although the Beardslees are looking at increasing numbers, they are quick to point out that expansion isn't for everyone.

"If you're standing still, you're going backwards, but there are a lot of ways to expand, it doesn't have to be physical in size," Beardslee noted.

"You can put on more cows, you can change practices. You make changes to improve the

March 2000, milk production was up 4.0 percent and imports (on a milkfat basis) were down 13.3 percent. Commercial disappearance, a proxy for demand, was up 4.4 percent on a milkfat basis this same period. These numbers suggest we sold slightly more than we produced. So why are milk prices still relatively low? We began the quarter with large carry in stock levels. As a result, we also ended the quarter the same way.

Still, sales of dairy products were very good the first quarter of 2000.

Butter consumption was up 6.4 percent; American cheese consumption was up 3.5 percent, and Other cheese consumption was up 8.5 percent. Nonfat dry milk consumption, however, was down 21.9 percent.

Still, my bet is that the following events will unfold: demand for milk and dairy products continues strong, butter prices remain high, U.S. cow numbers peak and begin to decline, and milk per cow slows with the summer heat. If those things happen, we should see higher milk prices this summer!

Finally, USDA announced June advance prices based on the following two-week average product prices on a per pound basis: butter $1.1140, nonfat dry milk $1.0100, cheese $1.1011, and dry whey $0.1755. These prices were used to compute the Class I base price of $11.70 per cwt. The latter is derived from the advanced Class IV skim milk pricing factor of $7.70 per cwt and the advanced butterfat pricing factor of $1.2195 per pound. Class I differentials are added to the Class I base price. The Class II skim milk price for June is $8.40 per cwt (the Class II nonfat solids price is $0.9333) and is based on the advanced Class IV skim milk pricing factor of $7.70

Corrections: last week I implied that the current futures contract for butter is cash settled It is not! That's why the new Class IV contract may have a big following; it is cash settled and will likely follow the butter price

DeLongs: From Sows To More Cows, Transition Proves Challenging

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — A former swine producer, Jim DeLong remembers many a sleepless night in 1998.

DeLong sat up late into the night thinking of ways he, as a farmer, could survive.

"We had to try to figure out what we were going to do," DeLong said, when hog prices fell to their lowest in history.

The ideas the family eventually put in place — converting swine facilities into heifer houses and coming up with ways to milk a herd large enough to sustain three families — were "figured out," DeLong said.

With help from his brothers and their families, Jim came up with three major changes:

- Convert a 44-cow stall barn to a calf barn.
- Convert sow barns from 3-month-old to 5-month-old calf barns.
- Move bred heifers to old hog finishing barns.

In addition, the family built new feed troughs and hay racks. Other work was done to finally convert what was once a thriving hog with some dairy farm into a profitable dairy.

A partnership that began in the early 1970s, Jim farms with brothers Ken and Gerald and families in Quarryville. Jim's family includes wife Martha and children Jen (married and off the farm); Jody, 16; Sam, 14; and Tom, 11. Ken's family includes wife Eleanor and children Jonathan, 19 and Jeremy, 12. Gerald's family includes wife Alma and children Jared, 9 and Kevin, 7.

The DeLongs rely on full-time help from Mike and Sue Appel and their children Matt, 17 and Angel, 13. In addition, part-time milking help is provided by Roxanne Sippel.

The DeLong's Hope Valley Farms herd includes 370 milking cows, grade Holsteins, with a rolling herd average of more than 18,000 pounds on Lancaster DHIA. Fat is 3.86 percent and protein, 3.12 percent.

Milk goes to Land O'Lakes Cooperative.

Responsibilities are split throughout the family, with Jim, the in-house "vet," who works closely with the cows and other barn work. Ken works with the calves. Jim cares for the fields, along with Ken, Gerald, and Mike.

Breeding wheels are key to managing the large dairy, noted Jim DeLong.

Jody DeLong works with Jess to ensure the cows are milked in the afternoon on time.

Jim said the farm began in 1948 by his father, M. Clair DeLong. The farm expanded slowly, starting with 12 cows, all milked by hand.

Though M. Clair was deceased in 1993, their mother, Miriam, is still involved with the farm.

In the late 1950s, M. Clair DeLong expanded the herd to 36 cows. "That's three times as many, and so did we," said Jim. A renovation and expansion in 1964 brought the herd to 44 cows.

In 1970, a second barn was remodeled and the brothers began taking over aspects of the farm. The herd stood at 100 cows.

But in the 1960s, the farm was primarily finishing hogs, numbering about 200 head. They switched to a farrow-to-finish operation in the 1970s. In 1984, a barn was built to hold about 120 sows.

But in December 1997, things began to fall apart. Hog prices plummeted.

"We felt we had to move in a different direction," Jim said. "We had to go to a whole new operation."

Several problems surfaced with the old buildings. The stall barns didn't look good and farm milking help was at a premium. The DeLong's biggest dilemma: how to milk enough cows while the labor continued to become scarce?

Milking out of a stall barn was "time consuming and labor intensive," said Jim. The hardest decision to make was to transition out of the hog business, he noted, with a maximum of 2,000 finishers per year, to a dairy.

In April 1998, the DeLongs got rid of the sows. In October the DeLongs broke ground on the double-12 dairy parlor. In November 1998, construction began. The double-12 parlor was finished in five months and 422 dairy stalls were constructed.

The Appels, working with the herd for 13 years, contributed greatly to the transition, Jim noted. All families work closely together to continue milking on schedule, twice a day at 3:30 in the morning and afternoon, to ensure the work would be finished on time.

Mike Appel feeds the large herd. Ken DeLong feeds the calves and heifers. Gerald maintains the eqwuipment and does office work, along with his mother. Early milking is done by Roxanne Sippel and Sue Appel. The children work about three days out of the week, rotating their schedules to fit in school time, church, and other activities.

Jim noted that obtaining the proper financing and business management assistance helped in the transition. When he sold his last shipment of hogs, he was getting 17 cents a pound — far under the break-even cost.

"We've been offered a good opportunity to farm," he said. With the children involved, crucial to the success of the farm, "if they don't like this, then they don't like to farm."

Though only a year on test, the full herd remains in the high 18,000 pounds at milking, with some individual cows at 110-120 pounds per day. Some high producers are in the 26,000-pound range now. Next year, the goal is to obtain averages beyond 20,000 pounds for the herd, "without a question," Jim said.

The large herd began milking April 1, 1999, "April Fool's Day," DeLong said, with a chuckle. Some of the herd was obtained from an existing dairy. Others were purchased and all needed to be trained. Others were built up gradually using the genetics at Hope Valley Farms.

"It was a lot of major adjustment," said Ken DeLong. The financial management and planning are getting easier, he noted.

The herd is fed a TMR consisting of haylage, corn silage, citrus pellets, cottonseed, quality of your life."

Good Attitude

They also feel that having bigger farms in the area won't push the smaller farmers out of business.

"The 60-cow dairy can make it as long as the family can accept the work load, the time, and all that. That's a pretty nice operation, but it's a full-time operation," said Roy.

Having bigger farms in the area is also good for farm infrastructure.

"There has been enough expansion (in the area) to keep the dealer and vendor outlook brighter," said Tim.

For Roy, the decision to stay in dairying is simple, but when it comes to making the jump to a bigger operation he admits being a little nervous.

"The older you get, the scarier it gets," said Roy. "You feel sort of secure with what you have, and Tim's not 25, so it's scary. Our numbers have outgrown our operation. It's a 20-year-old barn, and that's old by today's standards. We don't have the ventilation and the cows don't have the comfort."

Tim echoes Roy's sentiments, "You're either going to be in, or you're going to be almost out and working off the farm. That's the way I feel about it. As you get regulated more with manure and waste, you better start thinking a little differently about how to handle it."

Another of the major concerns with expanding is the amount of forage that will be necessary to keep the herd milking. Although the cropland is available, the distance from the fields to the barn would be great.

"We'll need to move forage so far and then you have to move the manure back out, which is even a bigger problem sometimes than getting the forage in," said Roy. " We don't know, but we're looking at our options."

Over the past few years, the Beardslees' forage program has evolved from an alfalfa-timothy mixture to one based largely on orchardgrass with alfalfa.

"Basically the orchardgrass will stand a lot better and take a more aggressive cut, said Tim.

Timing of the hay cutting is also important. For the past several years, Jerry Spencer has been custom harvesting their crops.When the Beardslees aren't milking cows and doing general farm work, they are active in several areas of the community. Barbara is a licensed practical nurse and is working on becoming a registered nurse. She plans to return to work when she completes her studies.

Roy sits on the Citizens and Northern Bank, East Smithfield Branch, advisory board, and is a former member of the Ag Choice Farm Credit Board.

Tim and Cathy have two children, Marc, age 13 and Miranda, age 10. Both children and both like to spend time on the farm.

The bottom line for the Beardslees, whether they undergo the expansion project or not, is to keep and open mind and a good attitude.

"If you don't look, you don't know what's out there," said Tim.

Tim Beardslee joined the partnership with his father in 1978. Since then, he's helped make management decisions and is working with his father and consultants to plan the dairy's expansion.

From Sows To More Cows

roasted corn, soybean meal, water, and a mineral pack. The citrus peels were added for energy. The DeLongs are looking into a variety of energy sources.

All cows are tagged and recorded by computers. One of the major challenges, Jim noted, was learning the computer system, which consisted of "months of struggle," he said.

The farm can manage up to 500 cows.

Building the numbers slowly is key, Jim noted. Through improvements in culling and breeding, obtaining quality bulls through an intensified AI program, will be key, according to both Jim and Ken.

Ken noted that having the children and full-time help with milking allows them to put more work in the fields. The DeLongs farm more than 400 acres, including about 300 in corn, 100 in hay, and 70 in pasture. The heifers are grazed on a simple pasture system.

Though the partnership began in the early 1970s, "we've worked together all our lives," Jim said.

The DeLongs offer the children competitive wages.

Now, with labor shared equally, the kids — and the adults — are "enjoying themselves," Ken said.

"We have so much to be thankful for," said Ken. "Our parents taught us many things, and one of the most important was how to communicate and work well together."

Dean Foods And Land O'Lakes Announce Fluid Dairy Sale And Joint Venture

FRANKLIN PARK, Il. — Dean Foods Company and Land O'Lakes, Inc. announced today that Dean Foods will purchase Land O'Lakes Upper Midwest fluid milk operations.

The two organizations also announced their agreement to form a joint venture to market and license certain value-added fluid and cultured dairy products to further expand and leverage the LAND O LAKES brand name nationwide.

Both agreements will include long-term licensing arrangements for use of the LAND O LAKES brand name. It is anticipated that the transactions will close, subject to regulatory review, on or about July 1, 2000. Terms of the transactions were not disclosed.

Land O'Lakes, a producer-owned cooperative based in Arden Hills, Minnesota, is one of the nation's premier food and agricultural companies. Dean Foods, headquartered in Franklin Park, Illinois, is one of the nation's leading processors and distributors of regionally branded and private-label dairy products.

The asset purchase encompasses all the operating assets of Land O'Lakes Fluid Dairy Division, including four fluid dairy plants located in Woodbury (Twin Cities area) and Thief River Falls, Minn., Bismarck, N.D. and Sioux Falls, S.D., as well as a new extended-shelf-life (ESL) dairy and cultured plant located in Richland Center, Wis.

The acquired dairy division generates annual sales of approximately $310 million and markets a full line of fluid milk, yogurt, creams, sour cream and cottage cheese, 85% of which is sold under the LAND O LAKES brand name. Land O'Lakes will be the long-term agent for supplying the raw milk requirements of the plants being acquired by Dean Foods.

Under the separate joint venture agreement, Land O'Lakes and Dean Foods will each hold a 50 percent interest in an independent entity having the U.S. rights to develop, market and license LAND O LAKES brand cream, half and half, sour cream and extended-shelf-life products, including the successful GRIP'N GO™ single-serve milk. The joint venture will bring to market innovative, functional-food dairy products in convenient packaging designed for the "on-the-go" lifestyles of today's consumers.

"The LAND O LAKES brand name and reputation for high-quality products has created this opportunity," said Chris Policinski. Land O'Lakes executive vice president and chief operating officer of the Dairy Foods value-added group. "The joint venture allows us to extend the reach of our most innovative fluid dairy products, and we will use the proceeds from the sale to build and strengthen our core businesses on behalf of our members."

"The acquisition of the Land O'Lakes fluid dairy operations is another key step in Dean's long-term strategy of integrating strong regional dairies into a cost-efficient national dairy company, better able to serve the consolidating retail sector and the individual consumer," said Howard Dean, chairman and chief executive officer of Dean Foods.

"In terms of geography, strategy, operations, R & D capabilities and organizational culture, it is hard to imagine a better fit between the two parties. Additionally, the joint venture will allow Dean and Land O'Lakes to work together closely to continue developing and marketing new, value-added dairy products under the highly respected LAND O LAKES brand."

No significant changes are anticipated in plant operations, employment or the positioning of the LAND O LAKES brand name.

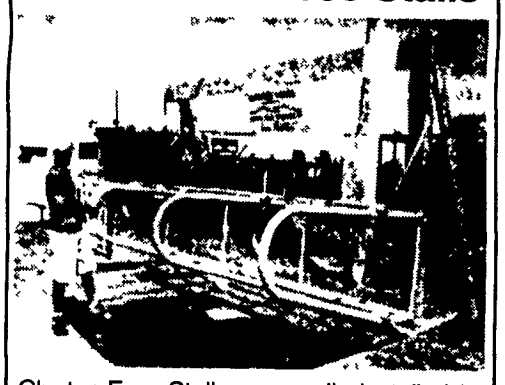
New Cluster Free Stalls



Cluster Free Stalls are easily installed in new or remodeled barns. The free stalls "hanging" from barn rafters provide many advantages to help keep cows safe and healthy. By using suspended free stalls, cows are less likely to obtain bruises. Thus all their energy can be concentrated towards increased milk production. The design of the stall allows it to swing up, down or back out of the way of the cow. Because they swing freely, the stalls can withstand the force of animal contact. And because they are powder coated, they require little maintenance.

Berks County Dairymen Are Optimistic

Clyde Myers
Berks Co. Extension Agent

Today's dairy farm families have optimism for their futures. This optimism is grounded in the knowledge that change is part of the farming business. This change is based on the reality that to raise a family, operations must get bigger, lower their input costs, and/or secure income from other than dairying.

A "traditional" dairy no longer exists. Each operation is and must be unique as dairy producers find their niche of profitability. This has led to the existence of large, grazing, organic, replacement, non-crop, off-farm income, etc., dairy farms. The existence of non-traditional dairy farms is and will be the norm, not the exception.

In the last few years, this change has been rapid and refreshing. Though the number of dairy farmers is decreasing, those left have a new spirit. We are seeing a change of the ownership and management to a younger generation of dairy producers who realize that managing an operation is more important than working longer hours.

In addition to making changes in their farms, dairy producers are joining with others in the agriculture industry to secure its future. Agriculture is a land-based industry. If there is not enough land, farmers, and raw goods, processing and distribution firms will not be able to exist in a geographic area.

This land preservation effort is essential for dairy farmers and the agriculture industry in each county, especially in the southeastern part of our state. The agriculture industry needs to determine how many acres of farmland are needed to keep an agribusiness system in a county, region, and in Pennsylvania.

An initial study, funded by the Center for Rural Pennsylvania and led by Dr. Tim Kelsey, Professor of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at Penn State University, will attempt to answer that question in southeast Pennsylvania.

Two programs are critical in land preservation. First, if production is to continue in each township, the municipality must develop effective agriculture preservation zoning. Zoning limits the amount of non-agriculture activities, such as housing developments, in its agriculture areas. It also allows farm-related businesses to enhance the agricultural economy.

Lancaster County has led the way in this area. Berks County is now developing this type of zoning in our agriculture townships. In the past five years, six townships totalling almost 30,000 acres have been placed into effective agriculture zoned areas. Berks County has over 80,000 acres in this type of zoning. In addition, five more townships are in various stages of developing their own effective agriculture preservation zoning.

Parallel with effective agriculture preservation zoning, purchasing agriculture conservation easements is essential. Zoning can be changed, but the purchase of easements has (at least in Berks County) been in perpetuity.

Berks County and Pennsylvania have made huge strides in this area, but additional effort must be made. Since the program started, Berks County has saved over 126 farms and 15,325 acres in 18 different townships. The best news is that the Berks County Commissioners have secured a bond for over $30 million for the purchase of agricultural easements program. Combined with state monies, over 25,000 acres will be preserved in this program the next five years.

Berks County has set a goal of preserving 200,000 acres of farmland to keep the agriculture industry thriving in our county.

USDA Protects 19 New Plant Varieties

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA has issued certificates of protection to developers of 19 new varieties of seed-reproduced plants. They include bean, lettuce, potato, rice, soybean, watermelon, and wheat.

The 19 certificates are being issued under the amended Plant Variety Protection Act. The amendments extend protection to F1 hybrids and tuber-propagated varieties and require that all protected varieties be sold by variety name.

The certificates require not only that the varieties be new, uniform, and stable, as in the original act, but also that they be distinct. The owners will have the exclusive right to reproduce, sell, import, and export their products in the United States for 20 years.

The 19 certificates are:

- Aspen variety of bean, developed by Idaho Seed Been Company, Twin Falls, Idaho.
- Margarita variety of lettuce, Coastal Seeds, Inc., Salinas, Calif.

USDA Issues Proposed Volume Regulation To Assist Cranberry Industry

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA has announced a proposed rule that would regulate the volume of cranberries to be marketed during the 2000-2001 crop year.

The newly proposed rule offers the industry three options to stabilize plummeting prices because of expanded production and mounting inventories. The industry's Cranberry Marketing Committee met on March 30 and recommended a producer allotment of 85 percent for the new season beginning Sept. 1. The allotment would establish the quantity of cranberries that handlers may purchase from, or handle for growers.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, which oversees the Cranberry Marketing Order, received industry comments following the meeting that suggested that the committee's proposal could inequitably affect some growers. To address these concerns, AMS developed two additional options which also appear in the proposed rule.

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture has been working closely with the cranberry industry to offer a useful range of options for producers to consider," said Enrique E. Figueroa, deputy undersecretary for marketing and regulatory programs. "USDA is encouraging growers and handlers to look carefully at the proposal, consider the options, and to submit their comments."

The comment period will officially open with the publication of the marketing order proposal in the Federal Register, and comments will be accepted through June 14. Comments should be addressed to the Docket Clerk, AMS Fruit and Vegetable Programs, USDA Room 2525-S, P.O. Box 96456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456; e-mail moab.docketclerk@usda-.gov.

The proposed rule can be viewed at www.ams.usda-.gov/fv/moab.html.

The eight-member Cranberry Marketing Committee, appointed by the secretary of agriculture, oversees the Cranberry Marketing Order that regulates shipments of cranberries grown in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Oregon, Washington, and Long Island, N.Y.

Cranberry production in 1999 reached an all-time high of 6.39 million barrels (one barrel equals 100 pounds of cranberries), 17 percent above the previous year and a 377 percent increase since 1960. In the same 30 years, harvest acreage has expanded 76 percent and growers have increased their yields 171 percent. Meanwhile, consumer demand for cranberries has leveled off, with total U.S. sales peaking in 1994 at 4.7 million barrels and dipping to 4.5 million barrels in 1998. Prices have suffered as a result. Growers have watched prices decline from a peak level in 1996 of $65.90 per barrel to $38.80 per barrel in 1998, and returns for the 1999 crop year are expected to fall below $30, evaporating profits.

Question: What are some early signs that the diet fed to our cows will cause laminitis? Will feeding bi-carb alleviate the problem?

There are some definite indicators that our cows are willing to share with us concerning diets that may lead to rumen acidosis and eventually to laminitis These can be grouped into two types, measurements and physical observations

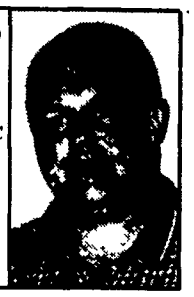
The physical observations are the earlier signs that we can see when the diet is wrong The problem here is that these observations are mostly not taken seriously enough and often times are not recorded to make them a management tool that we can rely on

For those dairymen that look at their cows with that special critical eye, cud chewing will tell us mostly what we need to know about the diet and the rumen heath maintained by it You should make these observations away from feeding, milking, and any other time that encourages cow movement A good time would be the time that you use for heat detection As a rule of thumb, 50% or more of the cows should be chewing their cud during this observation A bit easier evaluation can be done on only the cows that are lying down These cows that are resting should be chewing at a rate of about 3 out of 4 cows or 75% When a problem is suspected, you should increase the frequency of observation This will force us to realize the severity of the problem and not discount it to bad timing

Dairy producers that do not use this form of physical observation due to time constraint or some other reason can rely on measured information that we collect at intervals on the farm The obvious indicator that is easy to recognize is when we see milk fat depression Butterfat test that is substantially below normal levels for the breed is only one indicator of butterfat depression Using DHIA records to count the

Dairyman To Dairyman

GEORGE CUDOC
PA DHIA
Consulting
Dairyman



number of cows below 3 0% butterfat in a Holstein herd will allow us to recognize nutrition problems in the herd This number should not be greater that 2 out of every 10 cows or 20% Most often these will be cows with fat-protein inversions and indicate diets that do not promote good rumen health The ratio of butterfat to protein can be calculated for the herd prior to this by dividing the %protein by the % butterfat of the herd For example, a herd with a 3 0 % protein and 3 6% butterfat would have a ratio of 83% ((3 0 / 3 6) x 100) The expected ratio for Holstein herds would be 78 to 85% (true protein used) Herds that fall out of this range should recognize that a problem may exist and investigate further by counting cows with inversions or extremely low fat tests (below 3 0%)

Feeding bi-carb is a practice used by many dairies This should be used to help intakes in high producing herds especially during early lactation. The correct level to use is 75% of the ration dry matter Per cow that equates to 35# bi-carb fed per cow per day when the intake is 47# dry matter ((47 x 75) / 100 = 35) Unfortunately people look for bi-carb to solve poor diet related problems If you have the signs as we talked about above, then you need to do more than make "ARM and Hammer" rich by feeding bi-carb Look at your cows, evaluate the DHIA measurements, and then react by feeding diets that encourage good rumen function.

STYLES AND OPTIONS OF DAIRY FARMING
PART 2: ALTERNATIVES TO LARGE-SCALE DAIRYING

Timothy J. Fritz
Penn State Farm Management Extension
Chester and Lancaster Counties

The more I work with both successful and struggling dairies, the more I realize there are many ways to make a dairy work.

It is difficult to really know if a dairy is successful by just looking at surface issues such as production statistics and the size of the dairy. Successful farms, whether they are small or large, have some things in common.

Successful dairies:

•Meet the goals of the management.

•Have a good working environment for all involved.

•Are financially sound in respect to the goals of the owner.

•Look forward in their planning.

Also keep in mind most competitive businesses:

•Keep capital and overhead costs low.

•Focus on the things that they are good at and make them profits.

•Stop doing the things they are weak at and are not making money on.

Part 1 of this series focused on large-scale expansion. If you have decided that a large expansion is not in your future for one reason or another, what options are available for you to remain competitive.

Sometimes you get to a point where there is not much more you can cut or improve upon. The system in combination with your circumstances just is not competitive enough to make a living. Sometimes an infrastructure change or a change in style of dairying can work. Possibly you could also focus on a specialty business supporting another dairy or just focus strictly on dairy and not even grow any crops at all.

The following are components or styles of dairying that could help your farm as a "small dairy" remain competitive and keep on milking cows but at the same time limit the amount of "people" issues. Remember, a large-scale dairy involves being a "people person". Please note that "small dairy" is in quotations because "small" is a relative term and the ideas listed below allow or enable expansion.

As with everything, you still need to ask very critical questions, including profitability and long-term survival issues, including transferring the farm to your successor. Goals are critical into shaping the future of your farm.

The components include:

•Grazing systems.

•Efficient low-cost milking systems and robotic milking (This has possibilities but still not on the market yet).

•Focusing on managing and milking cows. TMR is purchased, and manure is marketed or managed in environmentally sound manner.

GRAZING

I have worked with management-intensive grazing systems (moving the cows to fresh pasture daily) for nine years and have seen its strengths and weaknesses. This system works great if the manager is committed to making it work.

The major benefits to the system are that capital costs are reduced by having the cows do much of the harvesting when forage quality is excellent. Harvest risk is reduced greatly. The pastures also serve as a great housing system that keeps the cows clean and healthy.

Typical cull rates for well managed grazing herds are 15 to 20 percent. The combination of lower capital costs, high forage quality, and low cull rates make this system very competitive. In addition, expansion is possible with little or no changes to feed and manure storage and possibly housing.

Milk production on this system as with any other system is dependent on the goal of the farmer. What does it take to make grazing work:

•Positive attitude to learn the system.

•Good fence and water system (you want a simple effective fence, not Fort Knox).

•A minimum of one third of an acre per cow (Supplemental feeding would be required at this high of a stocking rate).

•Time to observe pastures and cattle.

•Time to set up paddocks.

•Time to think about where the cattle will be tomorrow, next week, etc.

•A support or management team that believes in you and in your goals.

The major negatives of grazing:

•Time to learn a new system

•The cows need to be moved constantly, which requires time and dedication

•Hot weather is difficult to have cows actively grazing

•A backup housing system is still a good idea for extreme weather.

LOW-COST MILKING SYSTEMS AND ROBOTIC MILKING

It may seem odd that I lumped both low cost milking systems with robotic milking together, but the two really can be thought of in the same light in that they both have potential to improve the efficiency of the farm. Milking facilities and labor associated with milking are one of the major limiting factors on most dairies.

The low-cost systems include various flat barn parlors, swing parlors, and possibly other "no-thrills, bells and whistles parlors" focus on keeping capital costs low while achieving good cow flow. These parlors just get the cows milked and no more. Robotic milking when available may be high in initial capital cost but will cut labor costs considerably and quite possibly increase milk production per cow.

Both the low-cost parlors and the robotic systems free up labor to allow more cows to be milked, thus allowing a family to increase its herd size or cut its labor cost. Of course, when expanding herd size, all related pertinent questions must be asked. Grazing in combination with low-cost milking systems in my opinion have great potential, since the grazing system will provide low-cost housing and a partial manure system (the cows take the manure to the pasture).

FOCUSING ON MANAGING AND MILKING COWS

Again one key to surviving in a competitive industry is keeping the capital or overhead costs low. What I mean by focusing on managing and milking cows is giving up the crops or at least the activities associated with growing the crops and spending your time on either doing a better job on the herd that you have and/or getting a little larger.

By giving up the tasks associated with growing crops, you reduce your equipment needs greatly. The surplus equipment can be sold and overhead is reduced: You can even take this idea as far as having a TMR delivered to the feed manager.

If you facilities are set up, you could potentially have a farm with practically no equipment needs beyond cattle equipment. Of course you give up control of many items and you now rely on many service providers.

Working with the service providers will be critical to your success. Hopefully they can operate at a better economy of scale than you can and the cost would be lower than you doing everything.

Manure management or processing obviously would also need to be worked out. I can imagine feed companies expanding into TMR companies and those enjoy crop work more than the cows expanding their crop acreage to make high quality forages for the dairy producer or TMR provider.

The ideas mentioned above need an improved dairy infrastructure for it to happen, but we have been moving slowly in this direction for years and I am confident that farming will continue further down the road of specialization.

OTHER ISSUES

If you are just plain tired of milking cows and are looking for a change, you could possibly change the focus of your business into a dairy support business.

The following are examples of specialty strategies:

•Custom calf and heifer raising

•Dry cow boarding and care

•Custom TMRs (maybe in conjunction with a feed company)

•Forage production

•Specialty grain production

•Manure and nutrient management.

If you don't like any of these options and you can't seem to think of any other alternatives to keep you in business, maybe it is simply time to sell the business and work for someone else. If you are still connected to the land and the farm, there are plenty of other dairymen and crop farmers looking for someone with your work ethic and experience. You have nothing to be ashamed of and lots to be proud of.

USDA Announces New Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — USDA officials are adding another dimension to helping farmers improve water quality and provide wildlife habitat in 20 counties in southeast and central Pennsylvania through the new Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP), expected to begin sign-ups in June.

USDA has set a goal to provide conservation benefits on 100,000 acres in Adams, Chester, Dauphin, Juniata, Montour, Schuylkill, Union, Bedford, Columbia, Franklin, Lancaster, Northumberland, Snyder, Berks, Cumberland, Fulton, Lebanon, Perry, Somerset, and York counties, with 25,000 of those acres established in buffers.

The Farm Service Agency will provide cost-share for installing conservation practices as well as land rental payments in return for not cropping the land. Cost-share is set at 50 percent with state efforts under way to increase that figure to 100 percent.

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) will provide planning, design, and installation assistance to farmers for practices such as establishing permanent grass cover, tree plantings, grass waterways, forest riparian buffers, and wetland restoration.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission has provided funding to NRCS for nine wildlife habitat specialists which will be positioned throughout the eligible counties.

"This is an excellent example of a federal and state partnership working for the health of the land and the future of a healthy ecosystem," said Janet Oertly, NRCS state conservationist. "Our employees have a history of working one-on-one with landowners to plan options which cover all the aspects of the environment-soil, water, animals, plants, air and humans. CREP provides another tool to use in that planning process.'

Considerations will be given to landowner and renter relationships in these 10-to 15-year contracts which will reduce erosion, improve water quality, and provide food, water and shelter, as well as travel corridors for wildlife. USDA is partnering with the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection. Pennsylvania Game Commission, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Ducks Unlimited, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, and others.

"CREP is similar to the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) in land eligibility and contract lengths," said Bill Baumgartner, FSA state executive director. "It is different from CRP in that land rental payments and cost-share are much higher. This program should really benefit the land and the landowner."

CREP is a unique program sponsored jointly by USDA and the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. State officials are working to increase the cost-share amount to 100 percent. CREP is now available in 12 states, including the neighboring states of Maryland, Virginia, New York, and Ohio.

Interested landowners should contact their local USDA Service Center for more information on how to participate.

Farmer Funded Product Technologies Aim To Create New Uses For Dairy Products

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The butcher, the baker and the candy maker are all using dairy products in new ways, thanks to the dairy farmer-funded research.

"Research leads to more markets for dairy farmers' milk," said Jenny Wilson, director of communication for the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East. "Whether it's dry milk and whey ingredients used in meat and baking products or whey protein-based edible film in the confectionery industry, advances in dairy technology are creating new uses and improved functionality for dairy products throughout food manufacturing. That results in new ways to grow dairy sales and build more demand for dairy ingredients."

Here are just a few examples of how new dairy farmer-funded research helps to increase dairy demand:

- Adding carbon dioxide to the product during packaging extends shelf life up to 75 days for cottage cheese, 35 days for fluid milk and 35 days for ice cream mix, all without the use of artificial preservatives.
- Edible films made from whey protein isolates may soon replace gloss-producing shellac on chocolate candy. Whey protein isolates applied to fruits, nuts and other foods replace synthetic materials currently used to provide oxygen, aroma and oil barriers, thereby extending shelf life.
- Whey and dry milk powders improve flavor, aroma texture and other attributes in certain meat products. Dry dairy ingredients also improve the flavor, texture, appearance and nutrition of bakery products, frozen desserts, sauces, salad dressings, snack foods, and myriad other products.
- Adjusting the cheese-making process improves the melt and stretch of lowfat mozzarella and improves the flavor, body and texture of reduced-fat Cheddar cheese.
- Adding dry milk and whey powders to yogurt improves consistency and structure and increases total calcium and protein content.

"The new research responds to needs in the marketplace, which is really exciting," Wilson said. "Dairy farmer-funded researchers work with food manufacturers to identify areas where work is needed to produce the foods consumers need and want. Everyone benefits from working together. Dairy farmers have more markets for their milk, while consumers have more nutritious and better-tasting food choices."

Grass Is Never Greener On The Other Side

GENEVA, N.Y. — Turfgrass entomologists may live above ground, but a lot of their grubby friends don't.

More than 70 industry representatives, faculty, graduate students, and extension specialists from around the country attended the "Turfgrass Entomology 2000" conference at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, April 2-4, to talk about the grubs and other issues facing turf specialists and consumers.

The meeting was hosted by Michael G. Villani, professor of entomology at Cornell, and Patricia J. Vittum, associate professor of entomology at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

The conference was also an opportunity to celebrate the release of the second edition of "Turfgrass Insects of the United States and Canada." Tashiro, who is considered the dean of American turfgrass entomologists, was the sole author of the first book. A dinner was held in his honor during the conference.

"It was especially gratifying for us to meet at the experiment station. The turfgrass entomology community here has been considered one of the focal points of turf entomology since the 1940s through the research efforts of Dr. Gambrell, Dr. Tashiro, and myself," said Villani.

The station was, and continues to be, one of a small handful of institutions working on both fundamental and applied aspects of turf entomology.

"This is a national meeting and one of the most useful ones I go to," said Robert L. Crocker, associate professor at Texas A&M, whose current project is taping the sounds made underground by white grubs as a potential means of monitoring their numbers. "This meeting is a chance for us all to talk about environmental concerns, pesticides and alternatives to pesticides, to exchange new information on the ecology and biology of pest species, discuss new pests of turf, and talk about the effect of government regulations."

Seven topics were addressed during informative panel discussions over three days.

In the discussion on biocontrol, moderators Jennifer Grant (NYIPM/Cornell), Albrecht Koppenhofer (Rutgers University), and Parwinder Grewal (Ohio State University) took a look at the practical use of biological control agents for controlling turfgrass pests. The use of biological insecticides, predators, and parasitoids for insect control in turf was also discussed.

In a panel discussion on the transition of IPM from research to implementation, moderator Fred Baxendale (Univ. of Nebraska), Rich Cowles (Conn. Agric. Exp. Sta.), and Gary Couch (NYIPM/Cornell) discussed moving IPM from the classroom to the field to the end user, integrating biocontrol and traditional approaches in a realistic IPM program, and the status of action thresholds and sampling in IPM programs.

In university/industry/government/professional relationships, moderator Rick Brandenburg (North Carolina State Univ.), Dan Potter (Univ. of Kentucky), and Chris Becker (American Cyanamid) talked about how funding shapes the message, whether roles, goals and responsibilities were clear, and how these relationships affect graduate education now and in the future.

Moderators Chris Williamson (Univ. of Wisconsin), and Wendy Gelerntner (Pace Consulting, San Diego, Calif.) talked about advances in black cutworm management, from traditional and emerging control tactics to action thresholds and laboratory bioassays.

Pheromones and their use as attractants, arrestants and repellants was the focus of the session moderated by Paul Robbins (NYSAES/Cornell), Mike Klein (USDA/ARS), and Robert Crocker (Texas A&M).

Emerging Environmental Issues, such as the impact of FQPA on turf insect pest management, selective versus broad spectrum insecticides, homeowner use of products and local laws were addressed in a session moderated by Amy Suggars (TruGreen Chemlawn), David Cox (Novartis), and Gwen Stahnke (Washington State Univ.).

Conference organizers left one of the most interesting topics for last, as David Shetlar (Ohio State Univ.) talked about the emerging insect pests that have been reported in turf over the past year.

Ted Horton, superintendent of the much acclaimed Pebble Beach Golf Course, in Monterey, California, spoke at Tashiro's dinner, and outlined ways in which a golf course/planned community can behave like responsible neighbors. "These include environmental stewardship, community outreach, and a long-range vision to the sustained improvement of the region," he said.

"The meeting went off without a major hitch," said Villani. "We all know that events that appear easy to stage require a great deal of forethought and attention to detail. Nancy Consolie and Paul Robbins are responsible for the logistics of the meeting and they should be proud of their efforts."

Ag Horizons 2000 July 25

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Retail Face of Agriculture is the title of the 11th Ag Horizons Conference, scheduled July 25 at the Holiday Inn Harrisburg-Hershey.

The audience will be informed about e-commerce, entertainment farming, niche marketing, and direct marketing presented by agribusiness people actively involved these alternative approaches to "getting product to market."

Lou Moore, professor of ag economics at Penn State, will begin the daylong program by introducing the concept of alternative marketing and will set the stage for the balance of the day.

The topic of e-commerce will be tackled by Terry Kile of Weidenhammer Systems Corp. Stephen Quigley of Merrymead Farm, Inc., Lansdale and Janet Finney of Jack Finney Corp. of Cambridge Springs will discuss their operations as entertainment farming.

Niche marketing will be the subject for Roy Brubaker of Brubaker Farms, Mifflintown, and Romaine Erb, Brooklawn Farm Market, Lancaster, will discuss Brooklawn's venture into direct marketing.

Rounding out the program will be another Penn State professor of ag economics, Jim Beierlein. Beierlein will conduct a workshop entitled "Developing A Business Plan."

The conferences are designed to build awareness of emerging agricultural topics and issues, to provide a forum for information sharing, and to make available either take-home teaching tools or provide the awareness of those tools. Vo-ag instructors and cooperative extension staff are the target audience. Contributing cooperatives and Penn State, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives, sponsor the conference series.

The location of the Holiday Inn (Grantville) is new this year. The program will begin with a continental breakfast at 8:30 a.m., includes lunch, and is anticipated to conclude at 3:30 p.m. There is a charge of $10 with the mail-in registration or $15 at the door.

Educators who need more information may call Carol Duncan, 610-693-5601.

Top UD Senior Is From College Of Agriculture And Natural Resources

NEWARK, Del. — Jillian Licata, a senior animal science major in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, received the University of Delaware's prestigious Emmalea Pusey Warner Award for top female student at Honors Day ceremonies May 5.

Licata, daughter of Judy and John Licata of Holtsville, N.Y., is the first student from the college to receive the Warner Award, which is presented annually to the most outstanding woman in the university's graduating class.

Recipients must demonstrate exceptional qualities of leadership, citizenship and character exemplified by Mrs. Warner, who was instrumental in the establishment of Delaware Women's College. Nominations are made by faculty based on the nominee's academic excellence and active involvement in community and campus life.

According to Karen R. Aniunas, assistant dean for student services in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Licata's academic achievements are impressive.

"Her grade point averages, 4.0 in her major and 3.90 overall, are in a class by themselves," Aniunas said. Her exceptional abilities earned her an appointment as a teaching assistant in the biology department. She has the academic prowess of a graduate student.

"It's a great honor for this college to have Jill receive the Warner Award," Aniunas said. "Four of the five finalists this year were from the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, which is a considerable testament to the quality of our students."

Licata's accomplishments include conducting undergraduate research, which has led to her candidacy for a degree with distinction. She services as an ag ambassador, one of a select group of students who assist the college with recruitment. In addition, she is chancellor of Alpha Zeta (AZ), the honor society of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and is a member of the Animal Science Club.

For two years, Licata has been an ambulance attendant with the UD Emergency Care Unit, responding to 911 calls on campus and providing patient care during transport. She is also a volunteer at a local veterinary clinic.

She plans to pursue a career in research following graduate studies.

As a Warner Award recipient, Licata will receive a $1,000 U.S. Savings Bond and will have her name engraved on plaques in the Perkins Student Center and in Alumni Hall. She will also have the honor of leading the university's alumni delegates in procession into Delaware Stadium at the start of the 2000 Commencement ceremonies May 27.

Women Seek Agricultural Studies In Growing Numbers

NEWARK, Del. — Enrollment of women in the University of Delaware College of Agriculture and Natural Resources is on the rise.

According to Dr. John Nye, dean of the college, the increase follows a national trend that shows a shift in the percentages of women pursuing careers offered in the fields of agriculture and natural resources.

"When I first arrived at this college in 1991, the majority of students were male," said Nye. "Numbers have shifted ever since. For fall semester 1999, women accounted for 62 percent of our total enrollment.

"In our animal science major, which includes preveterinary medicine, 230 of the 280 students are women," he said. "These numbers correspond to a national trend in veterinary school enrollment."

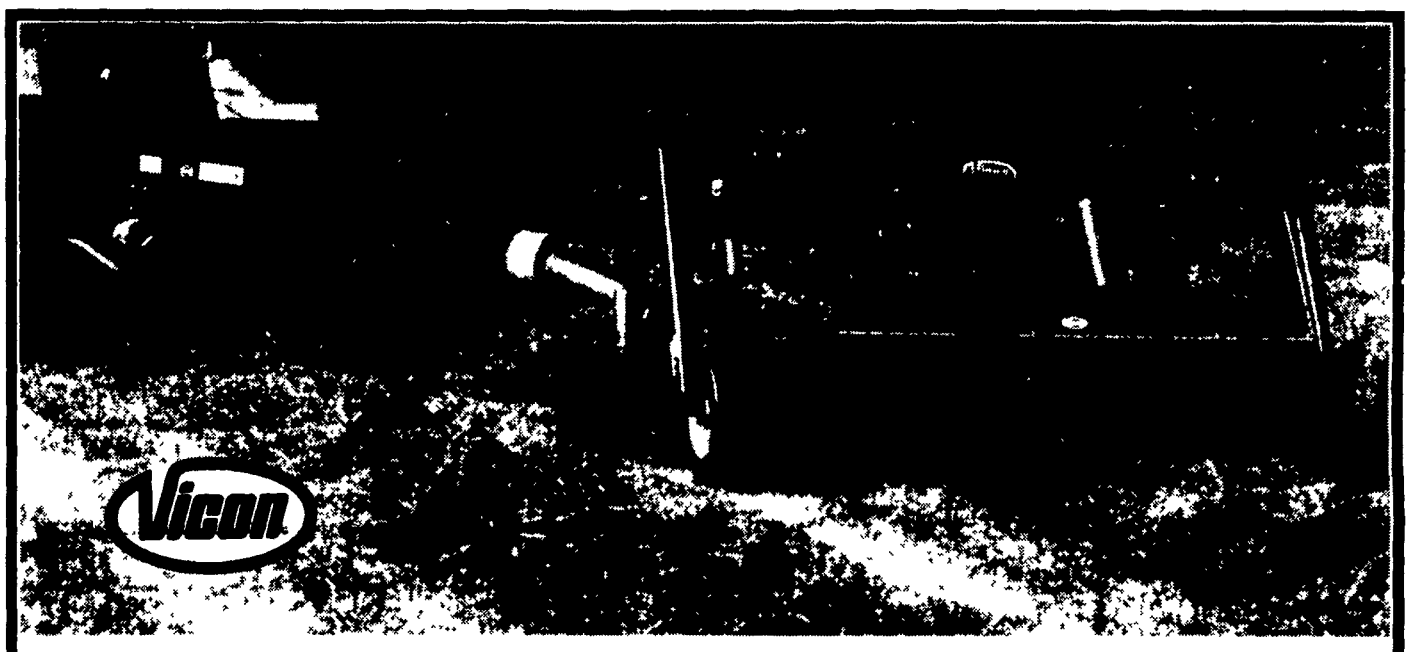
Women are signing up in greater numbers in all the college's majors across the board, Nye said. He expects total fall 2000 enrollment will be between 65 to 75 percent women.

Nye reasons that as women become aware that most majors in agricultural sciences and natural resources do not center on actual production agriculture, career options they had not considered emerge.

Nye recalls an encounter with a high school senior this spring at UD's annual Decision Day event. She told him she was considering a major in political science.

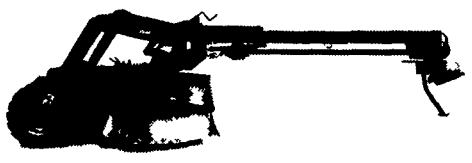
"I mentioned that the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources offers an interdisciplinary major that might interest her — natural resource management," he said. Both the student and her parents wanted to know if other women were enrolled in the college. Their guess was perhaps ten percent. They were surprised to learn that women make up well over half of our student body."

Studies in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources can lay the groundwork for careers in such diverse areas as composite materials development, environment consulting, securities marketing, wildlife management, food packaging, and biotechnology research in both industry and at universities.

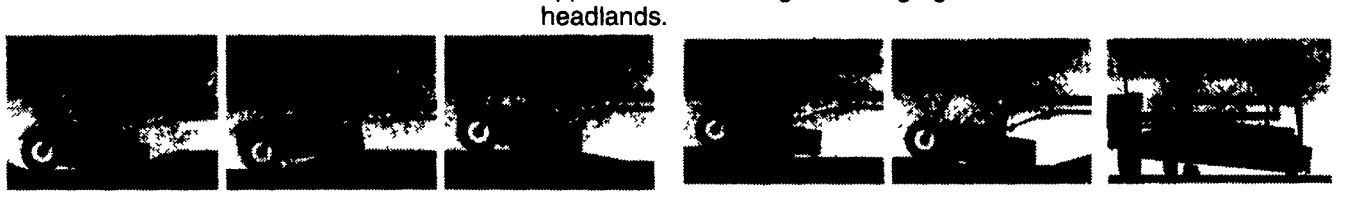


VICON'S KMR Trailed Mower Conditioners

A superb cut with excellent conditioning performance. Available in 7'10", 9'2", 10', 10'6" and 12'6" widths, Vicon is once again "Bringing Technology down to earth."



- Full swivel hitch - PTO stays in alignment when cutting square corners.
- "Free Float" suspension system - With 16" of free stroke in operating position, the cutterbar follows uneven ground and clears obstacles. The center hinge point also permits the mower unit to raise or lower at either side without adding excess pressure on the opposite side. The high-lift design gives swath clearance at headlands.



* Wedge shaped cutterbar - Less ground resistance, eliminates "bulldozing" in soft ground conditions, and allows for a lower cutting height when needed.
* 3 Blades per disc - Vicon's patented design puts 1/3 less load on each blade and an even load on the drive train.
* Top service hubs on cutterbar - Easy Maintenance.
* Labyrinth seals - A specially designed labyrinth seal on the hub of each disc prevents dirt, moisture, and all foreign material from entering.
* Full protected cutterbar - Cutterbar is supported completely with an extra shell and additional wear strips. A reinforcement rod stiffens the cutterbar to prevent flexing.
* Segmented intermeshing fully adjustable conditioning rolls.
* Adjustable formed swath doors for fluffy, easy to pick-up windrows.

Stallman: Farmers To Feel Brunt Of Interest Rate Hike

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — The interest rate hike announced recently by the Federal Reserve "represents another jolt to the nation's farmers and ranchers," who are already struggling due to skyrocketing fuel prices and plunging commodity prices, according to the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Following yesterday's rate hike, several banks announced increases in their prime rate to 9.5 percent.

"This will likely push many farmers' operating loans to well above 10 percent, rates not seen by many farmers and ranchers since the early 1990s," said AFBF President Bob Stallman.

"While the prime rate is the most often quoted rate, many farmers borrow for operating and intermediate loans at rates of one-half to one percentage point higher than the prime rate, with some at one-and-a-half points above the prime," said Stallman. "If interest rates for all operating and intermediate loans were to eventually increase by a full percentage point, that would add an additional $800 million in interest expenses for farmers and ranchers."

A producer wishing to borrow $200,000 to buy land or to refinance existing land loans would pay an extra $2,000 per year if long-term interest rates went up just one percentage point, he said.

Farmers and ranchers already face $2.6 billion of additional expenses because of higher fuel costs compared to last year. America's farmers and ranchers already face debt of around $173 billion, with $91 billion of real estate debt and $82 billion of operating loans and intermediate debt.

"Our biggest concern is the longer term," said Stallman. "The Federal Reserve gives every indication of planning to continue to increase interest rates for the indefinite future until the economy performs the way they believe it should. This will only squeeze capital-intensive businesses like agriculture all the more. All of agriculture will feel the effects as loans are renewed over the next year.

"Most real estate debt is at fixed interest rates. Most existing real estate loans will not be affected by this rate increase. But farmers and ranchers making new loans or refinancing existing loans will feel a direct impact. The Federal Reserve's decision may be targeted toward the general economy.

"Unfortunately, the agriculture community gets caught in the crossfire, and at a time when it can least afford another economic hit."

FDA To Strengthen Pre-Market Review Of Bioengineered Foods

ROCKVILLE, Md. — The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently announced plans to refine its regulatory approach regarding foods derived through the use of modern biotechnology.

The initiatives unveiled stem in part from input received during FDA's public outreach meetings held late last year and build upon programs already under way at FDA to help ensure the safety of all foods.

"FDA's scientific review continues to show that all bioengineered foods sold here in the United States today are as safe as their nonbioengineered counterparts," said Dr. Jane E. Henney, commissioner of food and drugs. "We believe our initiatives will provide the public with continued confidence in the safety of these foods."

FDA will publish a proposed rule mandating that developers of bioengineered foods and animal feeds notify the agency when they intend to market such products. FDA also will require that specific information be submitted to help determine whether the foods or animal feeds pose any potential safety, labeling, or adulteration issues.

Although the current consultative process has worked well, and the agency believes it has been consulted on all bioengineered foods and feeds on the market, FDA will propose to strengthen this process by specifically requiring developers to notify the agency of their intent to market a food or animal feed from a bioengineered plant at least 120 days before marketing.

After reviewing the company's submission, FDA will issue a letter to the firm describing its conclusion about the regulatory status of the food or animal feed.

To make sure that consumers also have access to product information, FDA will propose that submitted information and the agency's conclusions be made available to the public, consistent with applicable disclosure laws, by posting them on the FDA Website for easy viewing.

In a related step, the agency will augment its food and veterinary medicine advisory committees by adding scientists with agricultural biotechnology expertise. FDA will use these committees to address overarching scientific questions pertaining to bioengineered foods and animal feed.

FDA also announced plans to draft labeling guidance to assist manufacturers who wish to voluntarily label their foods being made with or without the use of bioengineered ingredients. The guidelines will help ensure that labeling is truthful and informative. To receive maximum consumer input, FDA will develop the guidelines with the use of focus groups and will seek public comment on the draft guidance.

Delicious Dairy Recipes To Get You 'Mooving'

Milk and dairy products have been a part of our culture since biblical times. And, with all of the nutrition, taste, and versatility, there's no question why.

One serving of dairy, which could be a glass of milk, two ounces of cheese, cup of yogurt, or a bowl of ice cream, provides our bodies with nine essential nutrients, including a complete serving of calcium. Calcium was named the supernutrient of 1998 because of all the functions it plays in our bodies.

Dairy also provides protein, vitamin A and D, and energy. Whether it's a glass of chocolate milk or a grilled cheese sandwich, dairy keeps us get mooving in our daily lives.

And who could forget about the wonderful taste of dairy products. No imitation could ever come close to the creamy and sensational flavor that dairy products add to whatever recipes you're making.

The following recipes were contributed by readers who share in the love of dairy. Along with their recipes are photos and stories about their families. These recipes, photos, and stories are a tribute to both the products and the people who help the dairy industry succeed.

Whether as a dairy farmer, an agribusiness person, or the family cook, all of these people help to keep the dairy industry vibrant. An industry that continues year after year to add dairy-delightful dishes to dinner tables everywhere.

HERMITS

1 cup butter
1½ cups brown sugar
3 eggs
2 tablespoons molasses
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon baking soda
2½ cups flour
1 cup raisins
1 cup chopped nuts (optional)

Cream butter, sugar, eggs, and molasses. Combine and stir in remaining ingredients.

Drop by teaspoonful on greased cookie sheets. Bake at 375 degrees for 7-10 minutes, and cool on pan one minute, before cooling on racks. Don't overbake as cookies should be soft.

My husband and I have a hay and grain farm in the beautiful Finger Lakes region of western New York.

We have two daughters, Linnell and Serita, and a naughty beagle puppy and three cats that think we live to serve them!

Our daughters play basson and percussion instruments, and we just returned from band competition at Hershey Park, representing Honloye Central School. The band students had a wonderful time at the park, and at the Harrisburg Hilton were we enjoyed the elegant atmosphere, the warm hospitality, and the indoor pool. It was fun for me to see some of the places we read about every week in Lancaster Farming. Thanks for a publication I always enjoy.

HASH BROWN POTATO CASSEROLE

2 pounds frozen hash browns, thawed to room temperature
1 pint sour cream
2 cans cream of chicken soup (do not dilute)
2 cups sharp cheddar cheese, shredded
2 cups Ritz crackers, crumbled
1 stick butter

Mix together sour cream and soup in bowl; add potatoes.

Spread in 9x13-inch greased baking dish. Sprinkle cheese over top evenly. Sprinkle crackers on top, melt butter, and drizzle on top.

Bake at 350 degrees for 75 minutes.

She loves to see the animals and tractors. Her favorite calf is Cocoa.

Melanie's father, Troy, is the fourth generation to farm the family farm in Hamburg, Perry Township. Her father and grandfather raise beef cattle. They raise corn, oats, and alfalfa, and grind their own feed.

POTATO CHEESE PUFF

2 cups mashed potatoes (leftovers)
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 cup cottage cheese
1 tablespoon grated onion
½ cup sour cream
3 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Paprika

Stiffly beat egg whites. Combine butter, cottage cheese, onion, and sour cream to potatoes with mixer. Beat the egg yolks, salt, and pepper into the potato mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into greased 1½-quart casserole and sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until puffy and golden. Serves 6.

This is a great way to use leftover mashed potatoes. It is a favorite potato dish of our three sons. We enjoy trying new recipes. Halfway through dinner, my husband will call for a vote. Everyone votes: thumbs up, thumbs down, or so-so. Majority rules and that will decide if that particular recipe is made again!

I enjoy making our house a home for my husband, Ken, and our four children; Kathy, 19; Michael, 17; Richard, 13; and Doug, 9.

We are active in church, school, and 4-H clubs. Our children are members of the 4-H Woolies Club and Michael is also in 4-H Dairy Beef Club. Kathy is finishing her first year of college at Word of Life Bible Institute, New York. Four children make for a busy home, but an exciting one!

CREAMED EGGS AND BACON

½ pound bacon
6 hard-boiled eggs, diced
4 or 5 cups milk
2 tablespoons corn starch

Cut bacon into small pieces and brown in frying pan.

Drain off all the grease. Add the milk to frying pan. Heat. Thicken with corn starch dissolved in milk. After thick and bubbling, add diced hard-boiled eggs. Serve over toast or hash-brown potatoes.

This is a quick dish to make for breakfast. Sometimes we have it for a light supper. My husband and I enjoy this dish.

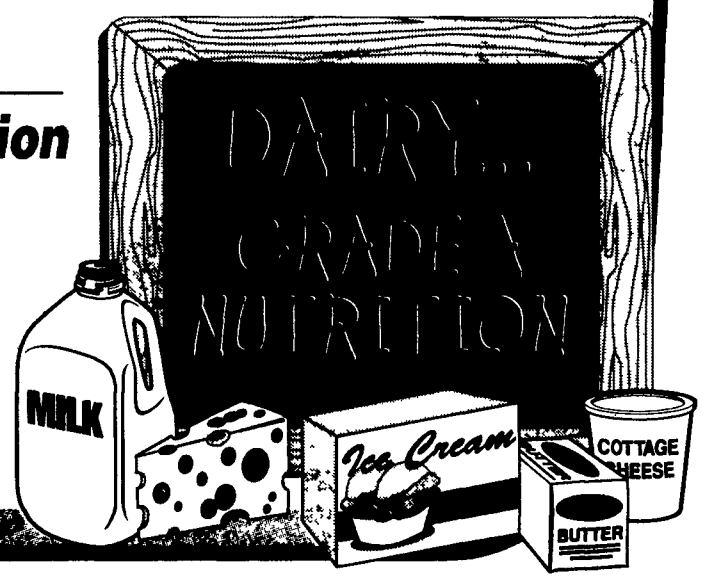
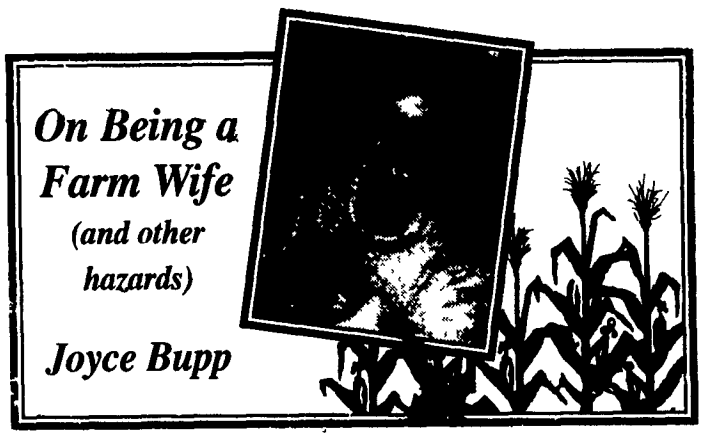
Quality Milk Producers





It's June — National Dairy Month.

Celebrating June as Dairy Month was a marketing tool originated years ago by the industry at a time when milk production reached its peak in springtime, when cows traditionally turned out on pasture cranked up their output to yearly production peaks. Thus, June became the month to salute the bountiful conversion of green grass to white milk.

But it takes someone other than a calf to harvest that output if consumers want to get their markets, instead of everyone having a do-it-yourself cow tied to the back porch. (Think of modern municipal ordinances dealing with THAT issue!) Thus, we have dairy farmers, less than 100,000 of us rapidly-disappearing entities, left in this United States, keeping the cows on our back porches-so-to speak-for everyone else.

So, in honor of our peers, we offer the following salutes, some shared by our DHIA technician, Joanne Lucabaugh, some via young dairy friend Raechel Kilgore who pulled them off her e-mail, and a few from yours truly.

You might be a dairy farmer if your backyard ends at an electric fence, you know the price of milk by the hundredweight, but not by the gallon, your kids sandbox is made from an old tractor tire, you have three pairs of rubber boots and two pair are for same foot, or the medicine cabinet in your house has a can of Bag Balm in it.

You might be a dairy farmer if you've ever used baling wire to attach a license plate to your truck, gotten an award for fat- and been proud of it, had to shower in the back yard with the garden hose before your wife would let you in the house, your idea of a power lunch is a sandwich on the tractor, or you refer to farms by who owned them 50 years ago.

You might be a dairy farmer if you have animals living in facilities more expensive than your house, your idea of carpentry includes a chainsaw, a neighborhood watch is someone calling to tell you that your heifers are out roaming the countryside, over 50 percent of your clothing advertises co-ops, feed, seed, semen or fertilizer suppliers, or your wife agrees to celebrate Mother's Day after the corn is planted and the haylage all harvested.

You might be a dairy farmer if you've been cited by the police for a cluttered dashboard, your idea of mass transit is moving your cows from the barn to the pasture, you have more than a dozen cats, manure is a dinner-table subject at your house, you know to listen to the weather forecast before selecting your wardrobe for the day.

You might be a dairy farmer if you have more photos of your cows than of your kids, you can tell the difference between the odor of a skunk and that of a cow lot, your idea of overnight delivery is pulling a calf at 2 a.m., you know that cow pies are not made with beef, you can tell those lights are a farmer working late in the field, know who it is, what they're doing, and that it isn't a UFO.

You might be a dairy farmer if your prayers include intercessions for cows and crops, you know the difference between field corn and sweet corn while it's still on the stalk, you can remember the name of every cow in the barn but the names of your grandchildren suddenly elude you, you can fix anything with baling twine, duct tape or a piece of electrical wire.

And, finally, a few of my own: You know you're a dairy farmer if bottles of frozen colostrum are stored between the hamburger and string beans in your freezer, your car is ten years old but there's a new mixer-wagon (haybine or forage harvester or silage truck, or whatever) sitting in the machine shed, you have missed a wedding, graduation, birthday party, and other important events because a cow was calving, had milk fever, got stuck in a gate or had emergency DA (twisted stomach) surgery, or have gone for an evening drive with your spouse to check the alfalfa and move field equipment.

So celebrate a little in honor of Dairy Month: Top your strawberries and ice cream with real whipped cream!

Nina Redding

A quick trip to the compost pile with dinner scraps the other evening left my sneakers quite muddy. A glance at the garden as I dodged rain drops on the way back to the house reminded me that in another month I'll be canning green beans.

With the arrival of summer, consumers will begin calling the extension office with canning questions as they begin to harvest the bounty of gardens and orchards. Here are some common questions that I receive. If you're just learning and building your wealth of experience, tuck these questions and answers in the back of your mind for future reference. If you're a seasoned pro at canning, think about how you would answer the question and then read on. Don't forget to take time to share your knowledge with those just learning.

• Can I safely use the older blue "antique" canning jars? Or do they seal properly with two-piece lids? Or can I use them in the pressure canner?

You can use blue jars designed with Mason threads. These seal easily with two-piece, self-sealing lids and may be processed in pressure canners. Bail-type closures, to be used with glass caps and rubber gaskets, are not recommended.

• What will happen if I use mayonnaise type jars for canning? I've heard they should not be used.

Mayonnaise type jars are acceptable for use when the food is processed in boiling water. Their breakage rate is about the same as for Mason jars when used for canning acid foods in boiling water. However, the breakage rate is normally higher when used for canning low-acid food in a pressure canner.

• The lids on a few of my jars came out of the canner all bent and deformed. What did I do wrong?

It's very likely that the screw bands were tightened too much. Deformation usually occurs with a raw-packed vegetable that was processed in a pressure canner.

• My jar lids weren't "down" when the jars were cool, but I pressed them down and they stayed down. Are these foods properly sealed?

• Remove screw bands and wash jars. If the lids and jars remain sealed, mark, store, and re-examine the lids after a few days. If they lids remain concave and tightly attached, their seals are adequate for long-term storage.

• My canned food did not seal after the proper cooling time. What can I do with it?

Within 24 hours, remove screw bands and discard lids. Examine and discard screw bands if rusty, bent, or deformed. Examine and replace each jar if its sealing surface is chipped or deformed. If necessary, place food in an acceptable jar; add prepared new lid; add a new screw band and tighten appropriately and re-process the jars the same as the first time.

• My home canned peaches floated. What did I do wrong?

It's probable that you raw-packed (meaning placed the fruit in the jar with out first heating) the prepared peaches. Hot packing helps eliminate air from the raw peaches and minimizes this problem. You may have also overtightened the screw bands. This practice would prevent the removal of air from jars while they are processing. Use of heavy syrup may also increase the tendency of peaches or other fruit to float.

• Why did my applesauce get pink? It seems fine. Odor is normal.

It's possible the pink applesauce is due to the variety of apples used; failure to remove apple skin; failure to use the hot-pack procedure; or failure to use antidiscoloration recommendations to prevent browning while preparing apple slices for canning.

Of course, these are only a few of the many common questions consumers have about canning food at home. If you have a question or would like to request Penn State's free Let's Preserve series on a variety of fruits and vegetables, give your county extension family living agent a call.

Dairy Recipes To Get You 'Mooving'

LASAGNA

1 pound ground beef
1 medium onion
1 quart jar spaghetti sauce
9 lasagna noodles
15-ounce cottage cheese
12-ounce mozzarella cheese
¼ cup parmesan cheese

Brown meat and onion. Drain grease. Add spaghetti sauce and simmer for 5 minutes. In a separate bowl, blend cottage cheese and parmesan cheese. In a greased 12x8-inch baking dish, layer noodles, sauce, and cheese. Begin with sauce and end with mozzarella cheese. Bake 30-45 minutes at 375 degrees until top cheese is lightly browned. Serves 4-6.

I live on my family's dairy farm with my parents' Russ and Pat Dressler and sister Mindy. We have about 110-head Holsteins, 65 are milking. We farm 210 acres.

I am grateful to my parents for choosing to be dairy farmers even though neither of them had farm background. Growing up on a dairy farm gave my sister and I opportunities other kids did not have, like working side by side with our parents and showing our heifers in 4-H.

On May 7, I was crownea the Juniata County Dairy Princess. I am looking forward to a great year promoting this wonderful industry.

EGG QUICHE

8 slices bacon or ham, cooked, diced
1 cup shredded cheese
3 eggs
1½ cups milk
½ cup Bisquick
¼ cup butter, melted

Put bacon and cheese in bottom of greased 9-inch pie dish. Mix, in blender, eggs, milk, Bisquick, and butter. Pour over meat and cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes, then serve. Serves 4.

This recipe can be doubled to serve 8 and will fit nicely in a 9x13-inch baking dish.

We are not dairy farmers, but we really enjoy this breakfast dish. It is quick and easy to prepare and finds its way to our table at least once a week.

Our family enjoys farming. We have two broiler barns and also an orchard farm market. Most of what we sell is grown here, including peaches, apples, strawberries, raspberries, and a wide variety of vegetables.

Our two sons, Josiah, almost 3 years, and Benjamin, 1½, are a blessing to us, and we are grateful for the priviledge to enjoy farming together as a family.

VIDALIA ONION PIE

Pie crust:
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chilled vegetable shortening
1 tablespoon butter
3-4 tablespoons ice water

Filling:
2 pounds thinly sliced Vidalia onions
½ cup unsalted butter
2 cups sour cream
3 eggs, beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
Dash hot pepper sauce
½ cup freshly grated parmesan cheese

For pie crust, mix flour and salt in large bowl. Cut in shortening and butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in water, 1 tablespoon at a time, just until mixture can be gathered into a ball. Wrap in plastic and refrigerate at least 30 minutes.

Roll dough between two sheets of floured wax paper into a large circle about ⅛-inch thick. Fit into a 9-inch pie pan; trim and flute edge. Refrigerate while you prepare filling.

Heat oven to 450 degrees. For filling, saute onions in butter in large skillet until crisp-tender. Remove from heat. Mix eggs and sour cream in large bowl. Stir in onion mixture, salt, pepper, and hot pepper sauce. Pour mixture into prepared pie crust. Sprinkle with parmesan cheese.

Bake at 450 degrees for 20 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 325 degrees. Continue baking until top and crust are golden, about 20 more minutes. Cool on wire rack. Serve warm.

Greetings from Rexroth Farm in York County.

We sure have appreciated the good farming weather so far this season. Just hope it continues. We don't need another year like last year.

We have a diversified farming operation — crops, beef cattle, and dairy. And our cows are Holsteins.

I enjoy Lancaster Farming every week, but I really look forward to the June issues. There are so many good recipes to try. And the contest with all the cow prizes — most of them black and white variety — makes it even more enjoyable.

This pie is wonderful if you like onions. People who didn't think they would like it, tried it just because I made it, and they couldn't believe how good it tastes. Hope some of you will try it and I sure hope you like it. Looking forward to preparing lots of new recipes for our farm crews.

POTATO CASSEROLE

2 pounds frozen hash brown potatoes
½ cup butter, melted
1 can cream of chicken soup
2 cups cheddar cheese, grated
½ cup chopped onion
2 cups sour cream
1 teaspoon salt

Mix together all ingredients. Place in buttered 3-quart casserole. May be prepared the day before and refrigerated, covered. Remove from refrigerator about two hours before baking. Bake at 350 degrees for 45-60 minutes. Serves 12.

My family enjoys this recipe very much.

Our nine grandchildren enjoy playing with the nine llamas that we raise.

DAIRY POTATO SALAD

4 pounds potatoes, cooked, peeled
1 cup mayonnaise
2 cups sour cream
½ cup vinegar
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped celery
4 hard-cooked eggs
Salt, pepper, and dill to taste

Slice potatoes and gently mix all ingredients together.

Lucinda is the 18-year-old daughter of John S. and Marcia Bray, Richland. She is the Berks County Dairy Princess and served as the Berks County Alternate Dairy Princess last year.

Lucinda is treasurer of western Berks 4-H Dairy Club and a member of Tulpehocken FFA. Cindy is graduating member of Tulpehocken High School 2000, a member of the National Honor Society, and Tulpehocken's Outstanding Young Woman of the Year.

Cindy is employed by Way-Har Dairy Farm, when not busy with her own Jerseys and Holsteins of Mountain-Edge Farm. She owns eight animals and enjoys showing her dairy cattle and market swine at various county fairs each year.

This fall, Cindy will attend Penn State University, main campus, to study landscape architecture.

Two of June Baklik's nine grandchildren are Ronny and Ashley who enjoy playing with one of the baby llamas the Bakliks raise.

RANCH BURGERS

2 pounds ground beef
1 cup milk
1½ cups cracker crumbs
4 eggs

Mix together well. Form into patties, roll patties in flour, and brown quickly. Place in layer in roast pan.

Sauce:
2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped celery
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup ketchup
1 tablespoon mustard
1½ cups water
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon garlic salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon salt

Combine all ingredients. Simmer 10 minutes. Pour over burgers and bake one hour at 300 degrees.

This recipe is one of our favorites. Especially the sauce. I use it on ham balls, too.

We don't live on a farm, but we still use a lot of dairy products. We have a bike shop plus a few animals. That helps keep Mary Lou, 12, and Wendall, 10, busy over the summer when there is no school. They also help their uncles on the farm.

SOUR CREAM CHICKEN

4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
2 cups sour cream
2 cans cream of mushroom soup
1 cup butter
5 cups Ritz crackers, crushed
1 cup cheddar cheese (optional)

Parboil chicken. Cut in chunks and lay in 9x13-inch pan. Mix soup and sour cream. Pour over chicken. Melt butter and stir in crackers. Spread on top of sour cream mixture. Top with cheese if desired. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Serves 8-10.

I'm sharing this recipe with you because it is one of our favorites. It is also easy and fast to fix. The sour cream and buttery crumb mixture is what makes this dish delicious. Thanks to all dairy farmers for making these products available to us.

Although we are not dairy farmers, my husband farms in his spare time. Besides his full-time job as a mason, he has 30 steers and also boards heifers. He also plants corn and soybeans on about 90 acres.

We have three children, Austin, 5, Kristy, 4, and Derek, 1.

Growing Summer Squash, Cucumbers Is A 'Vine' Experience

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Like children, yellow summer squash, zucchini, and cucumbers — also known as "vine crops" — respond best to tender, loving care early and then need to be given space to go out on their own, according to a vegetable expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"As long as you plant vine crops on raised beds and allow room for growth, you should have plenty of produce for the summer," said Peter Ferretti, professor of vegetable crops. "That's if you're willing to put in a little more work early in the process."

Ferretti said all vine crops can be transplanted if plantable containers or plastic pop-out containers are used, so gardeners can buy starter plants from garden centers or grow their own from seed. He said all vine crops require about a 21-day growth period from seed to transplantion. "Count out 21 days before Memorial Day and plant your seeds," he said.

Ferretti suggests planting three seeds per starter container, then allowing only the most vigorous seedling to grow to maturity. "In order for vine plants to germinate quickly, the temperature must be about 75 degrees Fahrenheit," he said. "They also require as much light as you can give them."

Once seedlings are ready, they should be planted in the evening to reduce heat shock. As soon as the plants are in the soil, they must be covered with a light mesh row cover, also known as a 'floating row cover."

"Cucumber beetles and corn rootworm beetles will immediately zero in on new vine plants," Ferretti emphasizes. "They can ruin all the plants in one night. Make sure the row cover is anchored securely. It will allow air and water to reach the plants, but not the insects."

Using row covers will reduce or eliminate pesticide use. If gardeners want to use pesticides, Ferretti recommends calling a Penn State Cooperative Extension office or a local garden center for information. More information also is listed in a fact sheet, "Growing Cucurbits," available at all extension offices.

For proper spacing, Ferretti recommends planting pickling cucumbers six inches apart, slicing cucumbers about 12 inches apart, and zucchini and summer squash 18 to 24 inches apart. Each row should be a raised-earth bed covered with plastic mulch or film. Raised beds will make it easier for gardeners to move among the plants, improve drainage, and reduce disease problems.

Ferretti said gardeners get the best results from trickle irrigation hoses or tapes, but standard watering is effective as well.

As soon as flowers form on the plants, about three weeks after transplanting, remove the row covers. "Vine crops must have multiple pollinations, so you shouldn't discourage honey bees or bumblebees by using insecticides. If the plant flowers and just produces a tiny fruit that turns yellow and drops off, then you have a pollination problem."

Vine crops require just moderate fertilization. Ferretti recommends using a 5-10-5 or 5-10-10 fertilizer at a rate of 3 ½ (three and one-half) pounds per 100 square feet before or right after planting. "You want a reduced nitrogen fertilizer because nitrogen will put more growth into the foliage, not the crop."

Zucchini and summer squash should be picked when they are 6 to 8 inches long. "The exceptions are smaller middle eastern varieties, which should be picked when 4 inches in length," Ferretti said.

Pickling cucumbers should be picked when 3 to 4 inches long, or at 2 inches if planning to pickle gherkins. Standard or slicing cucumbers can be picked when they reach 8 inches. Gourmet or burpless cucumbers should grow at least 11 or 12 inches before picking.

"Rely on the seed packet for harvesting information," Ferretti said. "The longer gourmet cucumbers are rarely found in supermarkets because their skin is so fragile they are rarely shipped. These are perfect for gardeners and also can be found at local farm markets."

By late June, gardeners will need to spray for squash vine borers two times, one week apart. Ferretti recommends asking local garden centers for appropriate pesticides.

Ferretti said recommended cucumber varieties are resistant to many diseases and top squash varieties usually are tolerant of mildews and some viruses. Gardeners can use a general fungicide that contains copper to prevent leaf spots and some mildews.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The leaves on the trees in our meadow have shut us off from our neighbors. We are surrounded by a sea of various shades of green. There is plenty of work to keep us busy here at home.

I've had sugar peas to pick since the middle of May. They are earlier this year as they were planted in March. The pheasant that I mentioned earlier, who lives in our yard, has found our strawberry patch. However, I do believe that there will be enough for him and for us.

Last week I attended a women's luncheon at our church. As is my custom, I was able to take a large bouquet of iris. There were six different shades of blue, yellow and brown. As the petals break off easily it was a problem to transport them safely in the car. I usually cut a hole, the size of the vase base, in a large cereal box in order to hold them upright in the car.

Our speaker for the day was a lady who was a quilter. She displayed some of her work and gave a talk on their background. It is an art from frontier days and they are not only beautiful but also serve a useful purpose.

We are not big popcorn eaters. But, one rainy day I decided to use some popcorn that we were given long ago. So, after popping it in a heavy kettle on the stove I decided to make caramel corn.

It ended up filling two big roasting pans and was shared with another family. I'll bet it won't take long for the three grandchildren to empty the tins and bags of this snack.

Now I must pull more weeds while the ground is still quite wet.

Creating Meals on the Grill

Grilling has become a way of cooking both indoors and outdoors that is fast and can be very tasty. Marinades can help fresh vegetables and various meats and fish maintain moisture as you grill them.

When grilling marinated foods turn food with long handled tongs or a metal spatula, not a fork, to prevent juices from escaping. If a marinade containing sugar, honey, or tomato products is used as a basting sauce apply it only during the last 15 to 20 minutes of grilling to prevent food from charring. Oil based marinades may be brushed on foods throughout grilling.

Though marinating is easy, it requires a balance between time and ingredients, or food may absorb too much or too little flavor judging marinating time depends upon the marinade's flavor intensity and the food's size and texture.

Here are some simple guidelines:

- Marinade flaky fish filets in lightly flavored marinades usually no longer than 30 minutes.
- Pork ribs and thick, less tender cuts of beef should be marinated in a strong flavored, moderately acidic marinade several hours or overnight.
- Never marinate food longer than 24 hours or it will begin to break down and become spongy.

Expect to use ¼ to ½ cup of marinade for every one to two pounds of food.

Marinated Chicken Breasts

¾ cup commercially prepared or "your own favorite" barbecue sauce
2 chicken breasts, split, boned

Pour barbecue sauce over chicken. Cover; marinate 1 hour. Drain, reserving barbecue sauce.

Place chicken on greased grill over low coals (coals will be ash gray). Grill 10 minutes on each side, brushing frequently with reserved barbecue sauce.

Makes 4 servings.

Marinated Grilled Pork

6 pork chops or pork tenders, cut approximately ¾ inch thick

Pork Marinade

2 teaspoons of finely shredded ginger
1½ teaspoons each allspice and curry powder
½ teaspoon each cayenne pepper and cinnamon
⅓ cup lime juice
¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons brown sugar

In a sealable plastic food storage bag or glass bowl combine ginger, allspice, curry, cayenne and cinnamon. Add lime juice, Worcestershire sauce, and brown sugar to spice mixture; seal bag and shake to blend or stir ingredients in bowl.

Place pork chops or tenders in bag and remove excess air, reseal bag and turn to coat.

If using a bowl: pour marinade over pork and seal with plastic wrap.

Refrigerate 6 to 8 hours.

Remove pork from bag or bowl and discard marinade.

Grill pork on grid over medium-hot coals, 4 to 5 minutes per side until the juices run clear, turning once. Garnish with lime wedges, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Grilled Bananas with Maple Yogurt

4 large bananas
2 tablespoons maple syrup
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup lowfat, unflavored yogurt ★
2 tablespoons maple syrup
½ teaspoon vanilla

Peel bananas and cut in half lengthwise. Combine maple syrup, lemon juice, and cinnamon. Brush on bananas. Place bananas in the center of cooking grate and grill one minute on each side or until slightly browned and warm. Cut into halves.

Combine yogurt with maple syrup and vanilla. Sweeten to taste. Drizzle yogurt over bananas.

★ Yogurt

Place 2 cups unflavored natural low-fat yogurt in a strainer that has been lined with cheesecloth and set over a bowl. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight. The "whey" will drain into the bowl leaving double thick yogurt in the strainer.

Well-Written Essay Wins Adams 4-H'er A Calf

14-year-old Steve Norris is looking forward to showing his new calf, Erkye, in 4-H this year. Steve is a first-year member and won the calf through the Adams County 4-H Dairy Club's essay contest.

JANET WILLIAMS
Adams Co. Correspondent

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Who says dairy farmers don't need strong writing skills? Here's a boy whose writing ability won him his first year 4-H project.

The essay contest, coordinated by the Adams County Dairy Club, does have an unusual prize, but it is the one that is most appropriate.

For the past four years, members of the Adams County Dairy Calf Club have had the chance to enter the essay contest and win the prize of a newborn calf.

Joy Hess, who helps coordinate the contest, said it has been a really good experience so far.

"Basically we started it because a lot of kids wanted animals to show and didn't have the money to buy one," she said.

The contest is open only to first year members of the club, so they tend to be 8- or 9-year-olds, just starting out.

To enter the contest, children have to write a 350-word essay about what they will do to take care of the calf. They have to explain where it will live, what they will feed it, and also list the reasons why they think they should be the one to win.

The calves tend to be about a month and a half old when they kids get them.

Hess said they do the contest early in the year so that the winner can get a calf by the middle of April to make sure the calf is young enough for the youngster to handle easily. "That way the calf doesn't get too far ahead of them," she explained.

Steve Norris, 14, of Emmitsburg, Md., was the winner of the contest this year. His calf, Eryke, was born on March 7, which also happens to be Steve's birthday.

Steve doesn't live on a farm, but he has spent a lot of his life on farms since his uncle owns Waybright Farms outside of Gettysburg. The young man has made arrangements to keep his calf at a neighbor's about five miles away from his home. He goes there regularly to tend to the heifer.

At this point, he working on getting her used to the halter so he can show her in August.

The animals given as prizes in the contest have been donated by local dairy farmers Larry Mummert of East Berlin and John Hess of Gettysburg. They were valued between $500 and $800 each.

"They're not fancy, elaborate calves," Hess said. "But they are something for the kids to get started."

Even children of active dairy farmers benefit from the program, said Tina Wilkinson of Gettys Acres near Gettysburg. Her son, Lee, won the contest two years ago. Although she and her husband's family are milking 210 cows, none of their calves could be used for 4-H.

"We don't show our cows because we don't register them," she said.

She said the program really helps the kids think about more than just 'wanting" a heifer. "It makes them really think about why they want a calf," she said.

Kids everywhere are enjoying ice cream sundaes and milkshakes as the weather heats up outside. Remember that June is Dairy Month and celebrate by enjoying lots of cool treats made with real milk and dairy products.

Why are tropical fish so colorful?
The vibrant yellows, purples, whites oranges and blues of tropical fish exist for all sorts of reasons, depending on the kind of fish
Some tropical fish are venemous Their brilliant colors are an underwater billboard that signals to hungry fish that, if they want to live, they better munch on something else
Colorful patterns also help tropical fish communicate The distinct markings of schooling fish broadcast the group's location to any fish that might have strayed Or, say a male fish is protecting a certain area His bright, visible colors quickly tell other males who's the boss of the spot The boss fish's fancy markings might attract female fish to the spot, too!
Finally, the colors might be a form of camouflage Some species of tropical fish have what's called counter shading Fish with counter shading have very light colors on their belly and very dark colors on the top When a predator looks at this fish from underneath, its belly's light color blends with the sun-filled water above it Likewise, the dark colors on top hide the fish when viewed from above
Still other species will have lines and colorful patterns that go through the eyes, camouflaging it That, paired with a big black spot on the tail — called a false eye spot — is thought to fool the predator into striking the wrong end of the animal, and the swift fish gets away
A lot of times a fish has several reasons for its bright markings To find out more about your favorite fish explore your local library or aquarium You'll find tropical fish can be a fascinating, complicated bunch!

Slugs Feeding On Corn Earlier This Year

WOOSTER, Ohio - Slugs are feeding on corn earlier than usual in no-till fields, and crop injury could become serious in the coming weeks.

Although feeding injury in north central Ohio was slight in mid-May, the newly hatched slugs could potentially cause more damage as they get bigger, says entomologist Ron Hammond, Ohio State University. Damage may already be apparent in fields where slugs would have hatched even earlier.

Corn and soybeans are most vulnerable to slug damage from the time of seed germination to the early plant development stages before the crop can outgrow their damage. Thus, it will take fewer slugs to cause economic injury to the smaller plants that have just emerged. Economic injury can occur very fast after feeding starts in a field.

Seeds are also vulnerable in exposed furrows or if slugs have other kinds of opportunities to reach the seed.

Growers and scouts should keep a close watch on fields with a history of slug damage. This damage might also start being seen in soybean fields.

The potential for a slug problem after last year's drought puzzles Hammond because slugs are associated with cool, wet conditions. Apparently slugs found some soil moisture to survive the mild winter. By early May, OSU entomologists were finding large numbers of egg hatches two to three weeks ahead of schedule in north central Ohio.

Dusk is the best time to scout for slugs; no-till fields—which are farmed without plowing and have last season's harvested crop residues covering the ground—are the prime candidates because slugs don't survive well in plowed fields. Farmers should lift crop residues to check the condition of non-emerged seedlings.

Most numerous and damaging is the gray garden slug.

Depending on field conditions, the dusky slug can be damaging, and to a lesser extent, the marsh slug. The dusky slug can cause significant stand loss in soybeans without a corresponding percentage of defoliation.

Gable Named Dairy Woman Of The Year

Berneta is one of only a few women who own and manage their own dairy operation.

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

NEW ENTERPRISE (Bedford Co.) — "I just can't imagine they picked an ordinary person like me for the World Dairy Expo "Dairy Woman of the Year" award."

But it's easy to see why Berneta (Snider) Gable is such a worthy candidate for the award as she stand in her well-kept barn surrounded by an outstanding herd of Guernseys, sprinkled with a few Holsteins and Jerseys.

Although she will not receive the actual award until October, Berneta has been informed that she is indeed the winner.

"I don't know how they picked me," Berneta said. "I have some very good friends who nominated me. They didn't even tell me; they just wrote letters and followed all the proper procedures and the next thing I knew, I was notified that I had won."

"It is indeed an honor. Already I can feel the effects," she said. "I have been invited to go on an agricultural trip to China this fall. I don't know if I can make it, but I'm sure going to try."

Berneta was born with farming running through her veins. The Snider farm, which she now owns, was homesteaded by her family in 1892, making her a fifth generation farming Snider. Her uncle Obie Snider won the World Expo Man's title a few years ago

Often referred to as "Snider's Golden Guernsey Homestead Farm," Berneta and her two brothers and two sisters were active in 4-H from the time they could lead a cow by the halter.

By the time she was college age, Berneta decided to pursue a teaching career and studied health and physical education.

It was a career that went no further than her degree, and she returned to New Enterprise to pursue her true love of farming on the family farm.

Berneta and her husband, Brad, a surveyor with the Pennsylvania Game Commission, have raised two children, Aaron and Kendy. Aaron is now working on the farm with his mom. Kendy, a sophomore at Northern Bedford County High School, has always been involved in 4-H and dairy cows.

Aaron and Kendy, as well as a host of nieces and nephews who were all furnished cows by Berneta, have won numerous outstanding awards at both local fairs and the Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

Snider/Gable cows have brought home championship Guernsey Pennsylvania State Farm Show awards nine times since 1990. The proudest moment, however, was when Aaron and his cow, "Georgie," took home the Grand Champion award at the World Expo in Madison, Wisconsin.

"I think nothing will ever mean quite as much to Aaron again," said Berneta.Berneta had to have two knee replacements recently brought about from years of jumping off a farm tractor or wagon.

Helping to keep it a first class farm is "Tweet," Berneta's brother, who handles most of the field work on the 300 acres they farm raising all the feed for their 140 milk cows and 100 head of youngstock.

The totally registered herd is artificially bred. However, they do raise five or six bulls a year to sell and keep one for clean-up purposes.

A nephew also helps out on the farm. "And, I couldn't do it without my husband Brad," Berneta said. "He is wonderful. When he is not working away, he is always here to help."

The animals are what makes Berneta fond of farming. She scratches an ear, rubs a nose, or gives a gentle backrub as she passes her prize winning animals.

"You have to take care of them," she said. "It's the only way they will produce."

Keeping up with the numerous changes in farming has been a constant challenge. "You have to learn the market. At one time, Guernsey milk was in great demand because of the richness. That's not really the case anymore."

Berneta also realizes the value of a computer on the farm and is learning in the precious spare time that she has mostly being taught by daughter, Kendy.

She realizes most farmers today are poor marketers and is alarmed at the misconcepts many get about farming.

"Few realize the hard work that goes into producing the nation's food," she said.

Meanwhile, she is proud to be a farmer and, although she can't understand why she was chosen, Berneta will be proud to accept her award.

Dairy Princess Inspired To Learn More About Dairy

Lori Connelly
Pennsylvania Dairy Princess
Dairy Month Special Columnist

Never have I learned so much and, at the same time, felt I've had so much to learn.

All nineteen years of my life I have spent among dairy cattle and the activities that come along with them. Eight months ago, I felt I knew what made this industry tick and what it took for a single glass of milk to find its way to my breakfast table.

But, on September 26, I was thrown into a world where I was forced to acknowledge the deficiency of my experience and knowledge. I was given the most humbling of opportunities.

Since my crowning, I have encountered people from nearly all facets of our industry. Each person I've met has left something to take with me after I pass down my crown. A piece of information, an idea, and, most often, a feeling of admiration is left imprinted in my mind as those I encounter share with me something from their own personal niche in the industry. This admiration is derived from the realization that their expertise is not just gained, but earned through years of experience.

Perhaps this realization is true of all industries and all walks of life. Maybe sometimes we each need to realize that no matter how old we are or how long we have been doing what we do, we will never know as much as we thought we did. That's the beauty of knowledge. It never ends. We can never know too much, and we can never run out of things to learn.

It's been said that the greatest leaders never rest on their accomplishments. Why should our industry rest on its accomplishments? There is so much that we do not know. Twenty years ago, who would have thought that the world's largest cosmetics companies would be demanding our products incorporate into their own? Or that milk could contribute to the fight of cancer?

Of all of the lessons and facts I've learned this year, the most important thing I've learned has been something that I've always known. Our industry is overflowing with bright, inspirational people who love what they do and love sharing it with others.

Thank you to everyone who has given me something to look back on when this year is over. You have each helped make my year rich. But, most importantly, thank you for giving me the desire to learn.

Barrett Garners Bradford County Dairy Princess Title

Carolyn N. Moyer
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — "I can't believe it," exclaimed an excited Samantha Barrett as she received the crown of the 2000 Bradford County Dairy Princess. The pageant was held at the Towanda Middle School on Saturday, May 20.

Barrett, daughter of Kevin and Catherine Barrett, of Towanda, was selected from a field of three contestants, who were interviewed and observed by judges Betsy Derstine, Mansfield; Charlene Shupp, Tunkhannock; and Susan Gesford, Springville, during the two-day event. Barrett is a junior at Towanda High School.

Named first alternate was Corissa Coolbaugh of Canton. Coolbaugh is the daughter of David and Cynthia Coolbaugh and is a home-schooled high school senior. Sara Jennings was named the second alternate. Jennings is a graduate of Troy Area High School and is the daughter of Nancy Jennings and the late Ronald Lynn Jennings.

Also promoting the dairy industry in Bradford County are dairy maids Marlesa Coolbaugh, daughter of David and Cynthia Coolbaugh, Canton; Rebecca Reagan, daughter of Ron and Shelly Reagan, Athens; Tiffany Spencer, daughter of Richard and Martha Spencer, Austinville; and Jenny Storch, daughter of Robert and Susan Storch, Troy.

The pageant was the crowning event of a series of activities, including a "meet the candidates" dinner, a dairy festival, and parade with the theme "Y2 Drink Milk."

During the pageant, each contestant was interviewed by Master of Ceremonies Senator Roger Madigan. They also were required to give a presentation and answer an impromptu question.

Barrett entered the stage as a cute, furry, "Milky Mouse" who just can't get enough dairy products. "I can't seem to get enough of those creamy, white, delicious, nutritious, does a body good dairy products," said Barrett.

As she traveled from the empty ice cream box to the empty yogurt container to the empty carton of milk, she almost gave up hope of having a snack, until she spied a piece of cheese firmly attached to a mouse trap.

"I find myself in a bit of a mess," said Barrett. "The outcome could be anyone's guess. Sometimes growth does come from pain, but I can do this if I use my brain."

With that, she snitched the drinking straw from the carton of milk and used it as a spear to harvest the cheese and with it, all the nutrients that she would gain from eating dairy products.

"Thanks again for listening to "Milky Mouse," said Barrett, "For I will soon be looking for cheese in your house!" "Milk, butter, cheese, ice cream, too. These dairy products are so good for you! Try them and you will see just how yummy they can be! " chanted Corissa Coolbaugh as she staged her presentation on "Babysitting Can be Dairy Fun". She also read a story about life on the dairy farm and the processes that milk and dairy products go through before reaching the market.

"Cinderelsie" was the story presented by Sara Jennings as she pretended to entertain her "grandchildren" during her skit.

"One day a prince decided to hold a big dairy show," said Jennings, "And he invited all the cows in the county to come to it. The farmer thought this was a really cool thing. This prince was looking for his royal Real Seal cow. A cow would have to be terrific to be a royal Real Seal Cow. Her milk would have to be delicious, as well as full of all the nutrients expected from milk; like calcium for strong bones, vitamins A, D and B12 for building cells and good vision and protein for strong muscles."

Although "Cinderelsie" wasn't the farmer's pick to take to the show, her "Dairy Fairy" came to her rescue and she was the winner of the show and soon became the Prince's Real Seal Cow.

While the judges deliberated, each member of the 1999 dairy princess court said their farewells.

For second alternate Heather Brenza, being in the dairy princess program helped her grow in so many ways. She was thankful to have the opportunity to serve the dairy farmers of Bradford County.

"This pageant is not about one girl winning," said Brenza, "It's about a group of girls coming together and going home friends."

For Melissa Croft, 1999 Bradford County First Alternate, the last year marked a year of opportunity.

"I've met hundreds of wonderful people and many of the people sitting here in this room have had a major impact on my life."

"Growing up a farmer's daughter, I always dreamed of being a dairy princess. However, I never thought it could come true. I found out, when you hold on to your dreams, they can guide you to your path to happiness," said Schriner. "When people realize how much hard work is put forth by farmers to produce milk, they begin to show respect."

Finally, Mable Wilson, Bradford County Dairy Princess Coordinator, thanked everyone for their ongoing support of the pageant and the dairy princess program.

"These girls work hard to promote the dairy industry," she said.

Jackie Schriner, 1999 Bradford County Dairy Princess, places the 2000 Dairy Princess crown on Samantha Barrett's head following the ceremony.

Nestled in a quaint valley between two churches tourists will find the home and garden of Alan and Jane Wood. Here visitors can enjoy a leisurely stroll around the pond, enjoying the fish and water lilies.

Midst 12 acres of woodland and rock, Kathie Rosse has carved an extensive garden featuring many native indigenous plants.

Tour participants won't want to miss the enchanted cottage in its rustic setting in the woodland garden of Richard and Peg Groff. This homestead is studded with glacier deposited rocks and boulders on the sloping ground.

For additional information, call (610) 367-9536. Proceeds will benefit the Boyertown Sister Cities Program.

Committee members Jennifer Hollingshead and Gail Koch discuss plans for the Sister Cities upcoming garden tour. This garden is one of the eight area gardens included in the tour.

The business meeting included a report on the Spring Rally news as well as a June bus trip.

The June 17 meeting will feature Nancy Marrow on the subject of butterflies.

The day's program had Mildred showing a diverse collection of angels from a two-inch angel with strung buttons for arms and legs to an 18-inch one representing the "messenger angel Gabriel."

Ruth Landis presided at the meeting, which was closed by singing the birthday song to a member and the theme song, "Brighten the Corner."

Sisters Renew Princess Program In Dauphin County

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Heidi and Holly Miller, daughters of Mike and Linda Miller, are the newly-crowned Dauphin County Dairy Princess and Alternate. The Miller girls are the first to serve as dairy royalty since 1994 when Jayanna Kopp finished her reign.

17-year-old Heidi was crowned by Jayanna on Mother's Day at Great View Holstein Farm, which is also where she lives. She is a junior at Central Dauphin High School and is president of the Lower Dauphin 4-H Dairy Club. She is also a member of the Junior Holstein Club and enjoys showing her Holsteins at local and state shows.

Heidi's school activities include the National Honor Society, C.D. Singers, school orchestra, choir, and school musical. She is also church pianist at the Devonshire Church and is very active in the church youth group. Heidi also is a pianist and alto singer for a local quartet.

Alternate dairy princess is Holly Miller, the 15-year-old sophomore at Central Dauphin. Holly serves as club photographer for the Lower Dauphin 4-H Club and is a member of the Junior Holstein Club. She shows both Brown Swiss and Holsteins at dairy shows.

A member of the Chanson Singers and the soprano singer in a local quartet with her sister, Holly is very involved in her youth group at the Devonshire Church. She works on the farm doing daily chores.

Little Dairy Misses include Rachel Crissinger, the 9-year-old daughter of Karen and Kenneth Crissinger of Gratz; Abigail Crissinger, the 7-year-old daughter of Karen and Kenneth; and Emily Miller, the 6-year-old daughter of Jeff and Cristy Miller and the cousin of Holly and Heidi.

During the pageant, both Heidi and Holly were asked an impromptu question and presented speeches about the dairy industry. Both girls eluded to the fact that they loved living on the farm and all that farm life offers them. They are also both very excited to promote the dairy industry and dairy products.

Jayanna gave her farewell speech and updated everyone on her life. She is still promoting agriculture and the dairy industry as Communications Director for the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. She will also serve on the dairy promotion committee this year. Jayanna is busy preparing for a wedding to be held this summer.

The pageant concluded with Jayanna crowning Heidi, followed by a picnic.

Chocolate Dessert Demonstration Featured At Milk Dealers' Convention

Terry Sheehan, executive chef for the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, demonstrates making fruit salsa, a blend of lime juice, sugar, cilantro, and your choice of chopped fruit.

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — About 20 women who attended the Joint Annual Convention of the Pennsylvania Milk Dealers Association and New York State Dairy Foods, Inc., enjoyed a demonstration and sampling session with the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center's executive chef Terry Sheehan.

The featured dessert was a chocolate crepe with a double cream marscapone cheese filling. "It's not terribly difficult to make," said Sheehan. "After a big meal, this dessert is light and delicious."

The ingredients for the chocolate crepe are flour, milk, eggs, oil, chocolate cocoa, powder, sugar, and salt. After mixing all of the dry ingredients together, Sheehan added part of the milk. "Always warm your milk to room temperature before adding it to the crepe mixture," he said. "The ingredients should all be at room temperature, and cold milk will cause the eggs to congeal."

Add enough milk so that the mixture is mixed evenly and smooth. After all ingredients are mixed, Sheehan added oil, which he recommended should be cottonseed or canola oil. He also added a little oil to the teflon pan before he poured in the mixture.

"Only put about two ounces of the mixture in the pan, and work it around very quickly," said Sheehan, who flipped the crepe after about 30 seconds to a minute in the pan. "Pour off any excess mixture once the crepe forms."

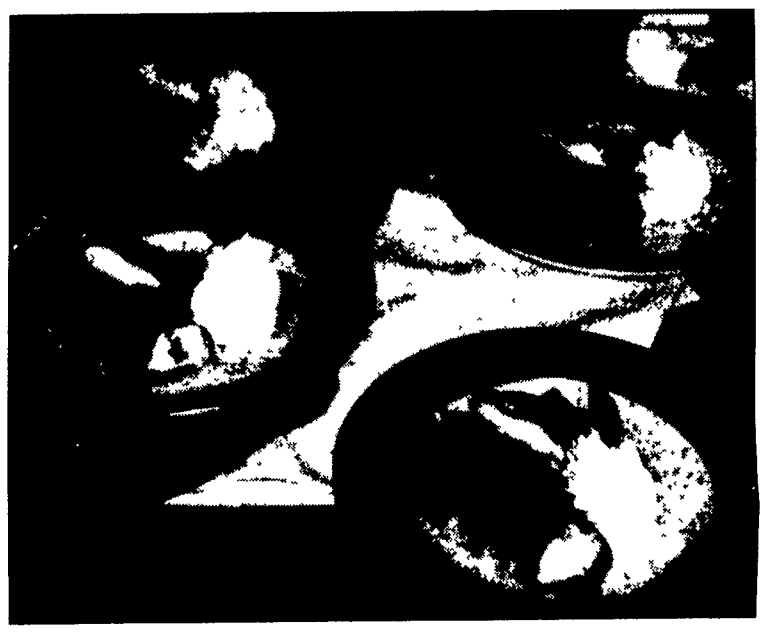
Sheehan used orange, lime, and lemon rind in the filling. "Take a vegetable peeler and peel the rind from the fruit," said Sheehan. "Then chop it in a food processor."

Sheehan also caramelized sugar in a pan and added the rind to the sugar, using cooking alcohol to infuse the fruit juice in the rind. "Don't overcook the rind," said Sheehan. "Remove it from the pan as soon as it is tender."

To make the filling, Sheehan added the syrup made from the caramelized sugar and fruit rind with marscapone cheese and 10X sugar. "You can use your own experiences and ideas to see what flavors you like most," he said.

He also mixed a fruit salsa made from chopped fruit, lime juice, sugar, and cilantro. The dessert was garnished with a strawberry fan. "Always garnish with something that is in your recipe," said Sheehan.

Sheehan used the dessert as an example of how food is becoming more practical. "It used to be about presentation and the food itself, with elaborate displays that weren't practical," he said. "But you have to think about how easy it is to make 100 plates of the dessert all at once. Also, people want healthy foods and normal portion sizes. Chefs who understand these demands are going to fare better."



Ladies attending the demonstration enjoyed samples of the Chocolate Crepe with Marscapone Cheese Filling and Fruit Salsa, which Chef Sheehan emphasized was a light and sweet ending to a heavy meal.

Where Do Butterflies Come From?

We've all seen butterflies fluttering about, but believe it or not, they didn't always have wings!

Butterflies go through four stages in life, and it's not until the final stage that they actually look like a butterfly. Adult butterflies, such as the Monarch butterfly as an example, overwinter in warm areas along the Gulf of Mexico. They return in the summer to find a mate.

The butterflies then lay eggs on the underside of leaves. You can often spot a striped caterpillar crawling on milkweed plants during late August or early September. They hatched from the eggs laid by adult butterflies. The caterpillars are also called larvae or worms. They crawl around for awhile, eating leaves and preparing for the next stage.

As the larvae finish growing, they spin a small silk pad that is attached to a leaf or branch. They will hang upside down from this pad and assume a J-shaped position.

The caterpillars are preparing to molt to the pupal or chrysalis stage and will soon begin building a protective covering around themselves. This covering, called a chrysalis, looks a little like a leather pouch. The chrysalis stage begins with a caterpillar, but after 10-14 days, a beautiful butterfly will emerge.

As summer temperatures cool into autumn, the Monarch butterflies begin heading south to their Mexican wintering sites. They will spend the entire winter here and in spring they'll find a mate and the process begins again.

Kids Grow Food

ITHACA, N.Y. — In this shrink-wrapped, vacuum-packed, pre-cooked world, Cornell University is striving to keep a strong agricultural connection active in the minds of 21st century children. The university's Agriculture in the Classroom program has developed the New York "Kids Growing Foods" school-garden program. This spring, grants are being awarded to 34 elementary schools in the state to establish or maintain these gardens.

"We're teaching children that food grows from the ground, it just doesn't come from a grocery store," said Margaret Barker, a program coordinator. "New York state is encouraging teachers to be more hands-on, and there's nothing more hands-on than a garden. Building a garden is a real-life experience."

The New York Kids Growing Food program sprouted from a 1997 antitrust case settlement between the New York state attorney general's office and a pesticide manufacturer. Settlement terms permitted then-Attorney General Dennis Vacco to apportion proceeds for New York's agricultural community, thus providing $130,000 for the program's first two years.

Since then, more than 100 New York elementary schools have received grants to develop gardens. Additionally, all garden project teachers have received professional development training, and the program has awarded scholarships to three teachers to attend Food and Fiber Across the Curriculum, an agriculture education summer course at Cornell.

In return, the schools have agreed to plant 60 percent of their gardens with edible fruits and vegetables, to develop a plan for summer maintenance, to publicize their gardens within their community, and to prepare a report on their garden experience. They also pledge not to use pesticides.

Reports from grant recipients show that the gardens touch more than the students, the teachers, and the parents. Farmers, local agricultural businesses, and community volunteers have lent their expertise to help these gardens grow. During the 1998 and 1999 school years, about 25,000 New York elementary school students have sown the seeds of gardening success. This year, about 8,700 more students will participate across the state.

"Kids are extremely excited, they're just really into it," Foster said. "

Blair County Crowns New Dairy Princess

TIPTON (Blair Co.) — Diana Bigelow was crowned Blair County dairy princess on Saturday, May 20, on the stage at Bland's Park, Tipton. Her ready smile and enthusiasm for the dairy industry won the hearts of the judges and the audience during the pageant.

Diana will be assisted by two capable and talented alternates, Corinne Snare of Tyrone and Angela Sollenberger of Curryville. All three girls where crowned by the 1999 Blair County Dairy Princess Heather Hoover.

For the creative presentation portion of the pageant, Diana, the 16-year-old daughter of Richard and Cindy Bigelow, presented a speech entitled "Why Drink Milk?"

Contestants were given a choice to present either a three-five minute speech or skit. Diana's speech outlined many of the nutritional reasons of choosing milk and real dairy products. Diana's delivery displayed her love and enthusiasm for the industry.

The final on-stage portion of the pageant was answering an impromptu question. Diana's question was "If you are selected as dairy princess what is one goal you wish to accomplish this year and how to go about doing so?"

Diana replied that her goal would be to reach more teenagers with the message of milk and dairy products. She stated that too many teens are making poor dietary choices and are robbing themselves of healthy futures. She continued that it would be her goal to educate teens about the nutritional value of milk over soda which has no nutritional value.

Alternate Corinne Snare is the 17-year-old daughter of Daniel and Virginia Snare of Tyrone. Corinne's creative presentation was a speech about The Changing World of Diary. She confidently spoke of the need for more consumer awareness of the dairy industry as the urban population grows and the agricultural population decreases. She also outlined some of the strengths of the dairy industry in the 21st century, including readily recognized advertising slogans like "got milk?" and the popular "Where's your moustache?" print ads.

Angela Sollenberger will also be assisting Diana this year as an alternate. Angela is the 17-year-old daughter of Gerald and Jean Sollenberger of Curryville. Angela entertained the audience and judges with her creative presentation a skit, geared towards elementary age students about Milk...it's in your future. For her skit, Angela was transformed in to a fortune-telling gypsy, who read the futures of several children while reminding them of the importance of consuming their daily need of milk and dairy products. Angela brings to the team several years experience in dairy promotion, as a former dairy maid and alternate dairy princess.

Mistress of Ceremonies for the evening was Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess Lori Connelly of Pennsylvania Furnace, Centre County. Lori kept the evening moving along and introduced eight junior promoters for the year.

Serving as a dairy maid is Tracy Bigelow, the 14-year-old daughter of Richard and Cindy Bigelow, Williamsburg. Tracy is an eighth grader at Huntingdon Christian Academy. She is the vice president of the Blair County Baby Beef 4-H Club, involved her in church youth group, and helps with the Williamsburg Farm Show. This will be Tracy's second year serving as a Blair County Dairy Maid.

Dairy misses, young ladies between the ages of 9-12, will assist the team primarily at summer promotions. The following girls were given their new dairy miss banners by outgoing dairy princess Heather Hoover. Emily Baker, 12-year-old daughter of James and Anita Baker of Martinsburg, Katy Bigelow, 10-year-old daughter of Randy and Twila Bigelow, Williamsburg, Kristy Bigelow, 9-year-old daughter of Randy and Twila Bigelow, Williamsburg, Courtney Huntsman, 12-year-old daughter of Randy and Karen Huntsman, Shasta Miller, 10-year-old daughter of Steve Clapper and Amy Miller, Tara Shollenberger, 10-year-old daughter of Earlyn and Lynette Sollenberger, Curryville, Jenna Smith, 11-year-old daughter of Max and Jeannie Smith, Martinsburg.

Serving judges for the evening were Vicky Daubert of Lewistown, Mifflin County, Paul Neer of Belleville, Mifflin County, and Brucette Metz of Allensville, Huntingdon County.

While the judges deliberated their selections, Miss Connelly introduced the Future Princesses between the ages of 4-8, and their escorts, the Future Farmers. Future princesses include Lindsay Knab, 6-year-old daughter of David and Genee Knab, Hollidaysburg, Desteny Ramsey, 7-year-old daughter of Brenda and Ellery Amick, East Freedom, Laura Ritchey, 4-year-old daughter of Tom and Cindy Ritchey, Martinsburg, and Carrie Russell, 5-year-old daughter of Rusty and Kristin Russell, Martinsburg.

Another highlight of the evening was the recognition of one of Blair County's long-time dairy farm couple George and Mary Brennaman, who were recognized for their years of work on the family dairy farm in Williamsburg. Sons Kenneth and Louis now manage that operation, with assistance from their father, George. Heather Hoover presented Mr. and Mrs. Brennaman with a gift basket and flowers.

Before crowning the new Blair County Dairy Princess, Heather thanked the committee for their support and guidance throughout the year and each committee member was presented with a long stem red rose.

Blair County dairy promotion chairperson, Twila Bigelow, presented outgoing Alternate Angela Sollenberger with a thank you gift for her work during the last year. She also presented Heather with a gift and $1,000 scholarship made possible by contributions from area farmers and agri-business people. Heather received this scholarship because she completed the second level of incentive as set forth by the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. Heather visited more than 30 elementary classrooms, spoke to more than 25 non-farm and farm meetings, did over 25 store or mall promotions, and completed more than 30 radio or television spots and newspaper articles.

I would like to extend my thanks to my family, grandparents, and friends for helping to make my dairy princess reign a success. Sadly to say, my reign ends this month. Nevertheless, I'm happy to have achieved my goals.

One goal, I brought the city and town people to the farm to show them what a farmer does in one day on his farm.

This spring, schools were invited to Loy-Acres Dairy Farm. I gave them an hour tour of the farm, showed the movie "Make Mine Milk," and handed out ice cream sandwiches to every child.

My year was a great accomplishment, especially when I hauled "Lorral" around last year and "Jasmine" this year to my many promotions. Children loved the little calves and this gave me an easier opportunity at promoting the dairy industry.

Remember June is Dairy Month. When you eat that cone of vanilla or chocolate ice cream, a piece of cheese, a cold glass of chocolate milk, or bake a cake, remember the dairy farmer has made it possible for you to enjoy such nutritious foods. If it were not for the dairy princess, who would promote the dairy industry?

Thank you for allowing me to promote the dairy industry in and out of Perry County. Enjoy June Dairy Month.

1 cup milk
2 6-ounce boxes instant stuffing mix

Put diced chicken in bottom of 13x9-inch pan. Mix soups, sour cream, and milk together. Pour over chicken. Prepare stuffing as directed on box and sprinkle on top of other ingredients. Bake covered in a 350-degree oven for 45 minutes. Uncover and bake 15 minutes longer.

We were served this dish at a friend's house and it was an immediate hit with our family. Our 10-year-old son, Jerry, especially loves this.

David, 8, and Mary Jane, 6, are my eager helpers in the kitchen as I bake for our roadside stand. I use lots of milk in my baking. My husband, Lavern, tends our two-acre produce patch in the evening after arriving home from his carpenter job.

I look forward to reading all the dairy recipes.

Cal Ripken Jr. Continues To Pitch Milk

PHILADELPHIA (Philadelphia Co.) — Cal Ripken Jr. was the man of honor at the annual Dairy Day at Camden Yards in Baltimore. The dairy industry recognized the baseball great for his role in promoting milk to thousands of fans.

Ripken joined the American Dairy Association/Dairy Council Middle Atlantic promotion team as a spokesperson 19 years ago. Since then, he has pitched milk to baseball fans throughout the Mid-Atlantic region through television commercials, billboards, and special events at Orioles games.

"Cal Ripken Jr. has been a superb spokesperson for the dairy industry," said Patricia Purcell, director of advertising and sales promotions for ADA/DC Middle Atlantic. "Ripken says his mother made him drink his milk when he was a young boy. He continues to drink milk every day, and credits it for giving him strong bones and allowing him to play the sport he has loved for so long."

During Dairy Day at Camden Yards, ADA/DC president Charles Schilling presented a framed "Cal Ripken Commemorative Poster" to Ripken on the field before a sell-out crowd. The poster, designed by artist Gary Yealdhall, was handed out to nearly 45,000 Orioles fans. It highlights Ripken's career and features milk.

Dairy Day festivities also featured Maryland State Dairy Princess Jeena Rinehart. The 17-year-old from Taneytown, Md., opened game day by signing the National Anthem.

Recent milk production activities have centered on Ripken's 3,000th hit, which came on April 15 in a game against the Minnesota Twins. ADA/DC was ready for the occasion with television and radio ads and new outdoor billboards, in the Lancaster, York, Harrisburg and Baltimore areas.

The billboards followed Ripken's hitting success, beginning the countdown where he ended the 1999 season at 2,991 hits. The billboards, which are viewed by more than a million people daily throughout the first half of April, were updated after every hit as Ripken neared the 3,000th mark.

Milk again captured the power behind Ripken's 3,000th hit as ADA/DC sponsored the on-field Orioles celebration of his latest achievement. The half-hour pre-game show broadcast by Home Team Sports on April 30 was brought to viewers exclusively by milk.

"The 'got milk?' logo was on-screen throughout the televised show, reminding millions of consumers of the 'real' power behind Ripken's streaks," Purcell said.

In addition to these events, ADA/DC Middle Atlantic donated 3,000 half-gallons of milk in Ripken's honor to the Franciscan Center in Baltimore to benefit the homeless, according to Purcell.

Beautiful Flowers Begin With Soil

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — If you're planning a flower garden this summer, start getting your soil in shape now. Soil preparation can save you time, labor and money as well as reward you with beautiful plants.

'Preparing the soil is the most important step in gardening," says Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Have your soil tested this spring, and use the test results and recommendations as a guide."

A soil test measures nutrient amounts and pH, or level of acidity. Soil pH is measured on a scale of 0 to 14, with 0 being the most acid, 14 the most alkaline and 7 neutral. Most soils naturally have pH levels ranging between 5 and 8. "Many flowers do well in a range between 6 and 7, so chances are you won't need to change your soil's pH much," says Nuss.

Don't guess when it comes to fertilizing and changing pH. Overapplying chemicals can harm soil and plants as well as pollute groundwater and streams.

Excess lime raises the soil's pH above what plants can tolerate, makes it more difficult for them to draw nutrients from the soil and slows growth of beneficial soil microorganisms.

Soil test kits are available for a nominal fee at Penn State Cooperative Extension county offices and larger garden centers. County extension kits include instructions for collecting soil samples, as well as the address of Penn State's soil testing laboratory. Samples can be mailed or delivered to the laboratory.

Test results are returned in about two weeks. Results include levels of potassium, calcium, phosphorus and magnesium, along with the soil's pH. Also included are recommendations for the kinds and amounts of fertilizer to apply and how much lime — if any — to add to the soil.

'If you're planning to grow rhododendron, azalea, laurel or other plants that prefer acidic soil, you may need to apply a chemical such as sulfur, which lowers pH, " says Nuss. "Apply no more than the recommended amount."

Till the recommended materials about 5 inches into the soil. While working the soil, remove stones, sod clumps, weeds and debris.

'Incorporate several inches of organic matter," says Nuss. "There's little danger of adding too much. Composted kitchen scraps, well-rotted manures, lawn clippings and decayed plant material all are good forms of organic matter. They help retain water and supply some nutrients for all plants set into the soil."

Add 2 to 3 inches of organic mulch on top of the soil around your plants. Mulch helps keep soil moist, prevents erosion, discourages weeds and builds up the soil's organic matter. "Mulch also tends to be more attractive than bare soil in an ornamental garden," says Nuss. "It keeps mud from splashing on your flowers and gives the ground's surface uniform color and texture."

Several kinds of mulch are available at garden centers, including wood bark chips, shredded bark and peat. If you use grass clippings, leaves or well-decayed compost, periodically loosen them with a hand cultivator or hoe to prevent surface crusting.

When your plants begin to flower, use a high-nitrogen fertilizer on the soil about six inches away from the base of each plant. Follow product application rates. This will enhance flowering and give plants a boost for the rest of the summer. "If you fertilize too soon, however, you will delay the plants' maturity and decrease the number of flowers," says Nuss. "Wait until the first flowers open."

Finally, retest your flower garden's fertility and pH levels each year for several seasons. If reports remain similar, you can reduce sampling to every three to four years. "Nutrient levels and pH gradually change over time," says Nuss. "It's important to keep monitoring the soil to keep levels optimum."

Soil test kits may be purchased for $6 at Penn State Cooperative Extension offices or in 111 Agricultural Analysis Services Laboratory, Tower Road, University Park, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

During the meeting, the club announced that June 6 will be the strawberry round-up. Club members received their 4-H strawberry third year project books.

The club also announced that the herb festival is Saturday, June 24, at the York Fair from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The club decided to put an advertisement in this year's fair book.

Two trips are scheduled for June. A tour of Brown's Orchard is scheduled for June 3 at 10 a.m. On June 14, the club will travel to Walnut Acres.

Lebanon Beef

The Lebanon County 4-H Beef Club, under the leadership of Brian Kreider, recently held a "hands-on" beef cattle veterinary clinic.

The clinic was held at MAP farm, owned by Michael and Martene Firestine. Dr. Brummel from Fifth Avenue Animal Hospital instructed the 4-H'ers in proper handling, proper area to give shots, parasite control vaccines, and various methods of castration.

Brummel demonstrated the scalpel method of castration. He prefers this method to branding and pinching because the area has an opportunity to drain. When castration is performed by the banding and pinching method, the area doesn't drain, leaving an opportunity for infection.

Brummel gave all 22 4-H'ers in attendance the opportunity to administer shots and apply dewormer. He explained that there are subcutaneous and intramuscular shots. He also stressed the proper area to administer shots is in the neck area. He explained that the neck area is not a prime source of meat. And, since abysses can form where shots are given, the hindquarters where prime cuts of meat are should not be abscessed.

Different types of dewormers and application methods were discussed. There are dewormers that are given orally by an applicator gun, applied by feed, or by lickblocks. Other dewormers available are pour ons and injectables. At the demonstration, a pour on and a paste dewormer were demonstrated.

Brummel explained why breeding cows receive annual shots of a nine way vaccination and why cows receive selenium shots. The nine way vaccine is used to prevent bovine viral diarrhea and respritory diseases, as well as leptosporosis. He explained that this area is selenium deficient, and beef cattle need the selenium to prevent white muscle disease.

He performed a pregnancy check on two cows, and explained why he used a plastic sleeve and what he was doing while he performed the procedure.

The "Hands-On" experience provided by Brummel and Kreider was both educational and provided an insight on proper health procedures through actual practice.

Creatures & Creations Club

The Creatures and Creations 4-H Club held two meetings. At the first meeting held at the McDonalds House, the club helped shear sheep with Roger Thomas. While enjoying beverages, the club discussed fund-raisers and decided to hold a tag sale. Dues were also discussed. It was decided that dues were a dollar at every meeting, and if any member misses a meeting, they will still be responsible to pay their dollar.

The second meeting was held at Dennis Wilson's house in Nicholson. The group docked tails of two lambs and made a small obstacle course for practicing with the Ilamas. The club plans to design an obstacle course for the Harford Fair. They will also participate in Wool Day at Old Mill Village.

Acre Lake Club

Jack Gardner, organizational leader for the Penn Manor 4-H Community Club, represented Lancaster County 4-H at the Pa. State 4-H Leaders Forum, State College. The two-day event brought together 100 volunteers from across the state for project and youth relationship workshops. Shown with Gardner is Marilyn Corbin, 4-H state program leader for children, youth, and families.

New officers are Danielle Bonham, president; Raven Matulevich, vice president; Kelly Diaz, secretary; Tegan Aherne, treasurer; Catie Durren, news reporter; and Chris Davis and Cody Jones, song and game leaders.

The club had a discussion about doing ugly quilts and doing a community service in Scranton or Montrose. Acre Lake's next meeting will be a picnic at Salt Springs.

Green Grove Club

The Green Grove Community Club in Susquehanna County held its meeting in the 4-H room of Rev. and Mrs. Sherman's home. The meeting began with Mr. Sherman telling club members which family members and friends provided the wildlife decorations for the 4-H room.

A special guest, Charles Arcovitch, wildlife conservation officer, passed around antlers, pelts, and skulls of various animals. He gave members information about Pennsylvania's wildlife. He also shared what you need to become a wildlife conservation officer. He also showed club members what he wears when on duty.

Arcovitch captured the group's attention and did a lot of hands on. He also entertained many questions and answers. After Arcovitch finished, refreshments were served. 20 members were presented, with a total of 48 people at the meeting.

Sizzlin' Steak Club

The Sizzlin' Steak 4-H Club in Susquehanna County held its meeting on May 7 at Mitchells' home. President Amy Paolucci opened the meeting with pledges. They also discussed their plant beautification spot at the fair.

The club's next meeting will be on June 4 at 8 p.m. at Paolucci's.

Junior High FFA members planned, designed, and conducted all of the day's activities with the Senior High FFA members' assistance.

Each elementary grade learned about a different topic involving the environment. Kindergarten learned about plants, and each student planted a sunflower seed and received a flower.

In first grade, the students explored forests and had a visit from Smokey the Bear. Second graders dug for information about soils. Each of the students learned about the importance of earthworms and at gummy worms.

Third grade students had a presentation on the untamed world of wildlife from Jerry Smith, Wildlife Conservation Officer from the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

In the upper elementary grades, fourth grade learned about fish and aquatics, while grade five dove into the topic of water with Craig Bingman from the Snyder County Conservation District. Throughout the morning, each sixth grade student built a bluebird house to take home. A total of 68 junior and senior high FFA members participated in the event.

4-H Leaders Provide Positive Relationships For Youth

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Today's youth need positive relationships with adults more than ever, and 4-H leaders can fill that role. To help adult and teen 4-H leaders become better teachers and youth counselors, Penn State Cooperative Extension brought together more than 100 volunteers from across the state at the 2000 Pennsylvania State 4-H leader's Forum, March 31 to April 1 in State College.

Pennsylvania has more than 10,000 adult 4-H leaders. Each year, these volunteers work with more than 125,000 rural and urban Pennsylvania youth between the ages of eight and 19. Volunteers give more than 20 days to 4-H youth - the equivalent of more than 1,000 full-time teachers in the field, or a contribution worth more than $20 million.

Today, 4-H also involves youth of varied races and cultures, youth with disabilities and youth that have not traditionally taken part in the 4-H program.

Workshops at the forum featured information on character building, horse safety, the Japanese Exchange program, putting 4-H club information on the World Wide Web, intergenerational programs, wildlife habitat evaluation, assessing risk in youth activities and using computers and the Web with 4-H projects.

Other sessions focused on building model horses, community service leadership, textile science, techniques for sharing positive spirit, foods and nutrition, woodworking and maximizing the abilities of people with disabilities.

Marilyn Corbin (left) state program leader, congratulates Alvena Kneasel, 4-H leader from Lebanon County whc attended the 2000 Pennsylvania State 4-H Leaders' Forum, March 31 to April 1, at the Days Inn in State College. The 4-H leaders participated in workshops focusing on topics that will help them become better teachers and counselors of youth.

Paradise 4-H'er Mary Zeng, right, and Katina Showman, Lancaster County 4-H coordinator, discuss upcoming legislation with Rep. Thomas Armstrong, Sen. Noah Wenger, and Rep. Arthur Hershey during Pennsylvania State 4-H Capital Days held May 1-2 in Harrisburg. Zeng and 120 other 4-H'ers from across the state were selected to observe how state government works by visiting 11 state agencies. The students took part in a simulation workshop in which they wrote grant proposals up to $100,000 and created a budget related to one of the agencies. Students presented their proposals to a three-person panel and joined 85 legislators for a legislative breakfast, program, and capitol tour.

Strong Cheese Sales Trend Continues In 2000

Last year's strong cheese market appears to be continuing well into 2000. Commercial disappearance of total cheese increased 9 percent in the first two months of the year compared to the same time period the year before, according to USDA figures. In the retail sector, Neilsen Research reports that, through mid April, retail cheese sales increased 5.5 percent compared to the same time period the year before.

Total cheese sales have increased by an average of 3.5 percent a year for each of the past eight years.

DMI vice president of cheese marketing Dick Cooper reports that one reason for the continued success of cheese sales is the integration of cheese marketing programs managed by DMI on behalf of the farmer-funded dairy checkoff.

"We're seeing a growing awareness of cheese resulting from the 'Ahh, the power of Cheese™' advertising campaign," Cooper said. "Plus, we have stronger participation by food retailers and processors, increased cheese featurings by national restaurant chains and strong public relations efforts, including the current 'Good Morning with Cheese Recipe Contest' featuring the TV personality Mr. Food. All of these elements working together result in a significant impact on the market."

Schools Increase Milk Consumption, Win Computer Prizes

More than 5,000 schools across the country competed in the 1999-2000 "Cartons for Computers" contest to see which school saw the largest increase in milk consumption among its students.

Two Grand Prize-winning schools received $10,000 in computer equipment and $2,000 in foodservice equipment. In addition, 25 regional prizes of $2,000 in computer equipment and $500 in foodservice equipment were awarded to schools that had the largest milk consumption increase in their region.

A special award was presented to an Indiana high school for executing the most creative in-school promotion of the contest. The plan included different milk-themed activities and special events, such as the "The Sound of Moosic Day," when the school's music class greeted fellow students with milk songs and jingles upon their arrival to school that morning.

"The 'Cartons for Computers' program not only teaches students the bone-building benefits of milk, but also gives schools an opportunity to win computer equipment as an incentive and helps educators teach students strong technology skills," said Kurt Graetzer, CEO of the Milk Processor Education Program (MilkPEP).

"Teen-agers are putting the health of their bones at risk when they choose soft drinks over calcium-rich milk," said Linda Racicot, executive vice president of domestic marketing for Dairy Management Inc.™, which manages the farmer-funded national dairy checkoff. "By drinking at least four glasses of milk a day, teens can help build healthy bones to help prevent the risk of osteoporosis in the future."

Dairy May Help Dieters Lose Weight

Lowfat dairy foods may help control body fat, according to a study published in the May 25 Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology (FASEB) Journal.

"We have shown that a diet rich in lowfat dairy foods affects the way in which fat cells do their job," said the study's lead researcher Michael Zemel, Ph.D., department head and director of nutrition, Nutrition Institute, University of Tennessee." A diet high in lowfat dairy causes fat cells to make less fat and turns on the machinery to break down fat, which translates into a significantly lower risk of obesity."

In the study, four different diets were administered to separate groups of mice. The diet highest in lowfat dairy foods yielded the greatest results in helping control body fat. To apply these findings to the American human population, the researchers analyzed the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES III) data set. After controlling for caloric intake, physical activity and other factors, researchers learned that body fat was markedly lower in people who consumed more dairy.

Further evidence of the dairy/weight loss connection was presented at the 2000 Experimental Biology Annual Meeting in April. Separate research from the University of Tennessee showed that diets high in lowfat dairy foods reduced body fat by 69 percent. Additional research from Purdue University presented at the 1999 Experimental Biology annual meeting examined the calcium intakes of women ages 18-31 during a two-year period. That study found that women who obtained their calcium from dairy foods lost more weight than those who used non-diary sources or supplements.

Zemel's study was conducted in part to substantiate a link between lowfat dairy and body fat reduction first noticed nearly ten years ago in a study of African American men. Although the objective of the earlier study was to examine the role of a dairy-rich diet in reducing hypertension, the results also showed that adding two cups of yogurt reduced participants' body fat by an average of about 11 pounds.

Santorum Maintains Push For Key Agriculture Funding

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Senator Rick Santorum (R-PA) recently sent a letter to the chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee asking for his support for key funding for Pennsylvania. Santorum is a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Santorum wrote to Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN), chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry. Lugar will be integral in the final funding package for agriculture that is approved by Congress.

Santorum wrote, "...it is my understanding that the conferees will also consider the issue of how to spend $7.1 billion that was authorized for emergency farm assistance under the budget resolution. As conferees begin forging this package, I would respectfully call to your attention the following items of strong interest and concern to me.

"First, I would encourage your continued support of minor and speciality crops. As we have seen in previous emergency assistance packages, the lion's share of assistance continually goes to large program crops to the detriment of specialty crop producers. While last year's emergency assistance package was a step in the right direction, there is a remaining need among producers in the Northeast who are still recovering from last year's devastating drought. I strong encourage the conferees to dedicate adequate assistance for specialty crops. Second, it is imperative that we continue to help our nation's dairy farmers who are receiving the lowest prices for their milk in 20 years. Given the inherent variability that accompanies dairy farming, these sustained, depressed prices only compound the financial position of dairy farmers. As the commonwealth of Pennsylvania's number one industry, dairy production is an important part of our economic and social fabric.

"Finally, I ask you to keep in mind the serious threat confronting the stone fruit industry in Pennsylvania, and across the nation, with the discover of plum pox virus (PPV). The affected growers in Pennsylvania were recently compelled to push out and burn their infected peach trees in order to destroy the virus. Despite early and ongoing efforts to secure compensation for removal and eradication, it has not been forthcoming. A small investment by the federal government is a meaningful step in containing the virus while compensating growers for their loss of trees and production."

Santorum's letter is his latest push to achieve vital agriculture funding. Recently, Santorum and Sen. Arlen Specter announced that the Senate Appropriations Committee has adopted legislation that authorizes the secretary of agriculture to award emergency compensation to farmers whose crops have been destroyed by the plum pox virus. The committee also approved $1.1 million for research into the plum pox virus.

In March, Santorum and Sen. Herb Kohl (D-WI) proposed legislation to provide $500 million in emergency aid to dairy farmers who suffered severe economic losses in the past year. Last August, Santorum introduced an amendment to the fiscal year 2000 appropriations bill to ensure that Pennsylvania producers received a fair deal.

New 'Biological Calendar' Predicts Plant Pest Attacks

WOOSTER, Ohio — An Ohio State University scientist has developed a "biological calendar" that predicts the emergence of tree and shrub pests, and thus the best time to spray for control, based on the blooming of ornamental plants.

The calendar shows, for example, that European pine sawfly eggs hatch at the same time as first bloom in PJM rhododendron, and gypsy moths hatch at full bloom in Spring Snow crabapple.

Dan Herms said the research can help nursery manages and gardeners make fewer but more effective pesticide applications. Furthermore, it can help them switch from long-lasting pesticides, which may soon be limited by new federal regulations, to shorter-lived "biorational" types.

Herms, an entomologist at the university's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster, based the calendar on three years of observations in the center's Secrest Arboretum. A final year of data is currently being collected. But accurate predictions are already possible.

"We've demonstrated that all you need is one year of data," Herms said. "The sequence remains remarkably constant from year to year."

That means plant growers anywhere can develop their own calendars and use them to time their pesticide applications, he said.

Herms' calendar is specific to the arboretum and to similar climates in northern Ohio. A calendar created in one climate is less accurate in another, the study showed.

Predicting insect activity based on plant development is an old practice. Aboriginal people have done it for ages. Recorded observations date back to at least the 18th century. But this is the first study to collect these sorts of observations on a variety of commercial plants and pests, to combine them into a single sequence, and the demonstrate the consistency of this sequence from year to year.

In general, the filed is call phenology, the study of recurring biological phenomena and their relationship to weather.

Herms looked at the blooming times of 86 ornamental plants and matched it with the activity of 40 insects and mites. The result is a list, in order, of what happens when.

The calendar is based on degree-days, a measure of seasonal warming. It works because the development of both plants and insects depends on the temperature, and the order of this development is the same every year.

For instance, Herms found that eastern tent caterpillar eggs hatch on average after 92 degree-days (starting from January 1 and calculated using a base temperature of 50 F). The date varied from March 28 in a warm spring to April 4 in a cooler one. But it always coincided with full bloom in Corneliancherry dogwood, which also occurred at 92 degree-days.

Other examples are holly leafminers, which emerge at first bloom in pagoda dogwood; alder leafminers, which emerge at full bloom in Amelanchier 'Regent" and bronze birch bores, which appear when black locust blossoms are peaking.

Until now, the emergence of bronze birch borers has been especially hard to forecast. "But we found that it can be accurately predicted simply by watching black locusts bloom along the highway," Herms said. "When black locusts begin to bloom, that's when you need to make an insecticide application for bronze birch borer.'

Good timing is certainly a benefit, he said. Instead of relying on the date or a schedule of regular applications, growers can spray only when a pest is present, not before and after. Pesticide use is cut yet control is the same or better. This is especially true for hard-to-detect pests and those that are susceptible only at certain stages. A calendar can show when they're present and vulnerable.

It can also make short-lived pesticides, such as insecticidal soaps and oils, more effective, since growers can apply them at just the right time. Pesticides with a longer residual effect — types that persist on plants and in the environment — might not be needed.

In fact, some of these pesticides might not be available. The Food Quality Protection Act of 1996, which sets new health-based standards for pesticide residues on food, may limit the use of persistent pesticides. So soaps and oils, which don't persist, may see wider use.

Another benefit of a biological calendar is that it can make it easier to manage a nursery. By knowing when pests will appear, "Nursery managers can focus their efforts, take things in the sequence they come, and greatly simplify the logistics of dealing with the huge number of plants in a nursery and the huge number of pests that may infect those plants." Herms said.

"I've found through surveys that most people don't know which species hatches when. By knowing the order that pests occur, growers can plan their pesticide strategies," he said.

Among the pests are spruce spider mite, birch leafminer, eastern spruce adelgid, holly leafminer, juniper scale, pine needle scale and fall webworm. All can cause damage in nurseries and landscapes.

Also included are three harmless butterfly species — red spotted purple, tiger swallowtail and monarch butterfly — because of the growing interest in butterfly gardening.

The research is funded by the Horticultural Research Institute and the Nursery Growers of Lake County, Ohio. Additional funding is being provided by the U.S. Department of Agriculture North Central Region Integrated Pest Management Program.

The USDA grant is for developing a Web-based calendar for farmers that lists plant development and insect and weed emergence at locations around Ohio.

NYSFDMA To Host 5th Annual Summer Bus Tour

E. SYRAUCUSE, N.Y. — Wayne County is well known for its apple orchards and rich farmland. But it's also rich in history and American heritage.

The New York State Farmers' Direct Marketing Association will be hosting its 5th annual summer bus tour exclusively in Wayne County. On June 28, Joan Allen from Long Acre Farms in Macedon, N.Y., will lead a tour of farm direct marketers through Wayne County's farm market operations that show the agricultural diversity and the history of the county.

The tour will begin at Joan's own farm stand, Long Acre Farms, where she'll show her own style of marketing.

"Bringing families out to the farm and providing them with fun, family activities along their fresh fruits and vegetables, gives them an appreciation of agriculture. We have a huge backyard area with a pavilion where we host corporate picnics and birthday parties. Our best attraction is the Amazing Maize Maze, a four acre corn maze with a different theme each year. Thousands come through every year to take the challenge. It's a lot of fun for them and for us, too," said Joan.

After Long Acre Farms the tour group will visit several other markets with their own unique marketing styles. Maier's Mud Acres, also in Macedon, has participated in farmers' markets for years. They've recently added a farm stand at the farm to accommodate the public's desire to visit them directly and purchase other value-added items.

Spring Valley Greenhouses in Walworth, N.Y. is another stop on the tour of Wayne County's farm market operations. Spring Valley will be celebrating its 25th year in business and is one of the largest producers of clematis liners in North America. They are also known for their beautiful display gardens, which has been a very successful marketing tool for them.

Some of the best produce in New York state is grown in Wayne County and can be found at Pine Hill Orchards, Lyons, N.Y. They offer all of the best fruits and vegetables along with generous portions of hospitality. They host monthly square dances and Friday fish fries. For the tour group, they'll also be providing lunch.

Orchard View Farm Market is a family run apple orchard in Wayne County. Their apples, cherries, peaches, and other fruits are offered for sale at their farm stand on Ridge Road in North Rose, N.Y. As a special treat, they sell ice cream with their own fruit add-ins.

Wayne County also has a rich cultural background. Alasa Farms near the south shore of Sodus Bay in Alton, N.Y. is an historic Shaker farm. They combine the U-pick orchards with educational tours of the Shaker farmstead that are now attracting motor coach tours.

One final stop takes the tour to Burnap's Farm Market in Sodus, N.Y. They are well known for the quality fruits and vegetables they grow and sell at their farm stand. They also have a bakery and ice cream shop. Of special interest to the tour group is their hydroponic growing system.

The day promises to be full of opportunities to view other marketing techniques and talk over issues and ideas with other marketers.

"While bus tours like this offer marketers a day away from their own daily grind, they are also full of opportunity," said Joan Allen. "Every farm stand has their own unique style of marketing their farm products. We can all learn from each other's experiences and ideas. And a bus tour like this brings us together and gives us that opportunity."

The tour of Wayne County's farm markets starts at Long Acre Farms in Macedon promptly at 9 a.m. and returns at approximately 5:30 p.m. The cost to NYS Farmers' Direct Marketing Association members is $30 per person and $35 for nonmembers.

For registration information, call Joan Allen at 315-986-7730 or Diane Eggert at 315-475-1101.

Junior Simmental Members Gear Up For Summer Season

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Members of the American Junior Simmental Association (AJSA) are looking forward to their usual busy menu of summer activities.

Four regional classics, followed by National Classic XX, are on the upcoming calendar of events.

Regional classics, patterned after the national classic, are planned at four wide-ranging locations. "The regional events are located so as to be reasonably available to most of our membership," said Eric Gerdes, the American Junior Simmental Association (AJSA) president from Danville, Iowa.

"Regional classics are a great way to meet people and to prepare for the national event," Gerdes explained. "We urge our members to get ready for the national classic by studying at home and by attending a regional classic if they possibly can."

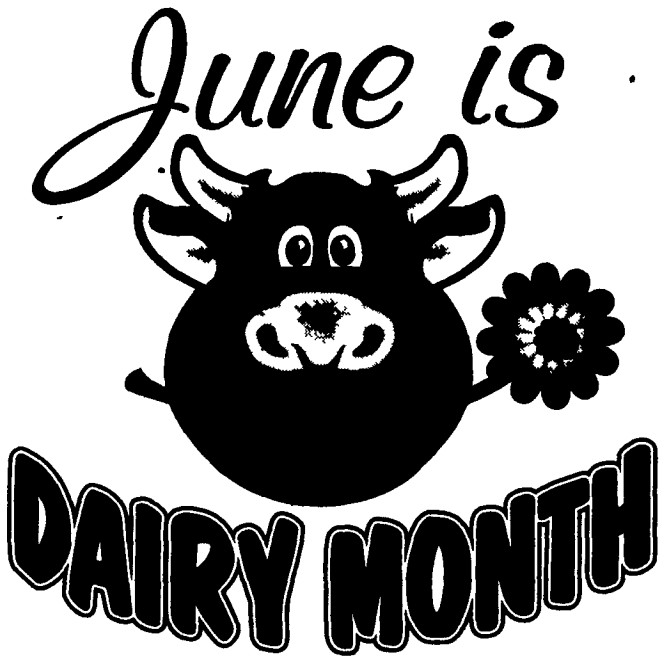
Regional classics will be in all four regions: eastern, June 14-17, Lebanon, Ohio; south central, June 15-17, Shreveport, Louis.; western, June 21-25, Bozeman, Mont.; and north central, June 21-24, Hutchinson, Minn.

National Classic XX, traditionally the highlight of the AJSA year, will be in Stillwater, Okla., July 17-21. Hosted by the Oklahoma Simmental/Simbrah Association (OSSA), the event will be headquartered at the Best Western-Stillwater. All cattle events will be centered at the Payne County Fairgrounds.

Up to 300 AJSA members from 30 states are expected to participate in junior and senior divisions. Competition is held in a variety of cattle-related categories, including a herdsman's quiz, sire summary quiz, beef bowl, public speaking, sales talk, heifer exhibition, showmanship, advertising and promotion, and job interviewing.

Extracurricular activities on the schedule include a dance, volleyball tournament, cookout, and a festive awards banquet.

More information can be obtained by calling ASA at (406) 587-4531 or visit the web site at http://www.simmgene.com. Inquiries can also be emailed to simmental@simmgene.com.



Dairy Cattle Field Day, Public Open House Set

CLARKSVILLE, Md. — The University of Maryland's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources invites dairy producers and dairy farm youth throughout the state to a morning field day Saturday, June 10 at the Clarksville facility of its Central Maryland Research and Education Center from 10 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

Central Maryland families are invited to an environment-centered afternoon open house at the same location from noon-3 p.m. The theme will be "A Healthy Environment, a Healthy Me."

Two morning walking tours in the dairy barns area will provide insights into how research and extension educational programs are benefiting Maryland's dairy farmers. Dairy cattle-oriented youth may hone their observational skills in a morning judging practice session.

Lunch will be available during the noon hour from local vendors at nominal cost. Area youth groups will sell refreshments throughout the day.

The afternoon open house will feature hay-wagon tours of the dairy barns, a manure-composting site and a nearby wetlands area. There will be numerous hands-on educational exhibits concerning human nutrition, clean water, the Chesapeake Bay, growing seeds and viewing farm animals. Equine 4-H demonstrations will include information on feeding, safety and care of horses.

Master Gardeners and representatives of the Maryland Home and Garden Information Center will be on hand to answer plant questions. Homeowners are invited to bring sick plants to the Plant Clinic for problem identification.

The UM Clarksville facility is located about eight miles south of Rt. 70 and a few miles northwest of Columbia's Village of Harper's Choice.

To find the facility from Rt. 29, go west Rt. 108 toward Clarksville/River Hill. Turn right on Homewood Road at the stoplight for Harper's Farm Road. Watch for the dairy barns on your left, about a third of a mile beyond the intersection.

For more information on the morning dairy cattle program, call (301) 596-9330; for other details, call (800) 342-2507.

UMES Goat Field Day Set

WESTMINISTER, Md. — The University of Maryland Eastern Shore (UMES) in Princess Anne will host a Goat Field Day, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, June 3.

A youth program will be from 9 a.m.-noon.

Jason Keplinger, a dairy goat producer and former 4-H'er from Mt. Airy, Md., will conduct a dairy and meat goat showmanship clinic.

Youth should bring their own goats to work with. UMES will have extra goats to use. Youth with lamb projects may also bring a lamb to work with, as meat goat and sheep showmanship are virtually the same.

A production program will be in the afternoon from 1 p.m.-5 p.m. Learning stations will include basic health care and management; internal parasites by Susan Schoenian, Wicomico ag agent; UMES/Research Update by Dr. Niki Whitely, UMES livestock specialist; animal identification and record keeping by Joe Hartman, UMES livestock technician; and marketing discussion led by Rick Blevens, meat goat producer and president of the Lower Shore Goat Producers Association.

It was several years ago that UMES established small teaching herds of meat goats, sheep, and Wye Angus cattle, in addition to its swine and poultry units. The latest addition to UMES's animal science program is Katahdin hair sheep.

Hair sheep do not require shearing or docking and are more tolerant of internal parasites. They are similar to meat goats, and make a suitable small farm enterprise for the Delmarva Peninsula.

There will be an educational display on hair sheep at the Goat Field Day. The field day will also feature a judging contest for youth and adults.

Advanced registration is not required for the field day. It is free to attend. Lunch is on your own. Refreshments will be available. For more information, contact Susan Schoenian at (410) 749-6141 or ss80@umail.umd.edu; Niki Whitley at (410) 651-6194, or nwhitley @mail.umes.edu; or Rick Blevens at (410) 632-3188 or blev0022@aol.com.

- Exclusive diagonal-lipped fluted-roll seed cups ensure uniform seed distribution.
- Close-coupled maneuverability.
- Large-capacity seed hopper to cover extra acres between refills.

A Special Feature For All Case IH Grain Drills
Fluted Roll Feed Cup Assemblies Save Seed and Save Time
A known fact that Case IH die-cast zinc alloy feed cups are superior to other competitive brands Long life comes from oil-impregnated, molded sintered metal inserts act as a positive bearing surface to surround and support the fluted roll

Large throat clearance allows the handling of big seeds and prevents seed damage

Shut-off block is molded of steel and delivers consistent cup to cup seeding accuracy Exclusive tapered metered edge at the bottom of the feed cup provides unexcelled seeding accuracy, even seed flow, and more uniform spacing

For replacement parts for your existing drill, buy Case IH quality from our Parts Dept. Now! Precision engineered to fit your grain drill exactly!

And you get more than a precision grain drill You can count on us for genuine, value-priced parts, professional and reliable service support, and flexible financing

Take a look at a Lease.

Tax deductible.	Your payment is usually 100% tax deductible.
Lower payments.	Since payments are based on use during the lease, not the equipment's whole life, payments are generally lower.
Flexible terms.	Lease terms are custom fit to your situation. Length of lease — set up so you have the equipment during its prime. Payment frequency — monthly, quarterly, semiannually, or yearly, your payments match your cash flow. Purchase option — more choices! Buy the equipment, renew your lease or return it for a newer model.

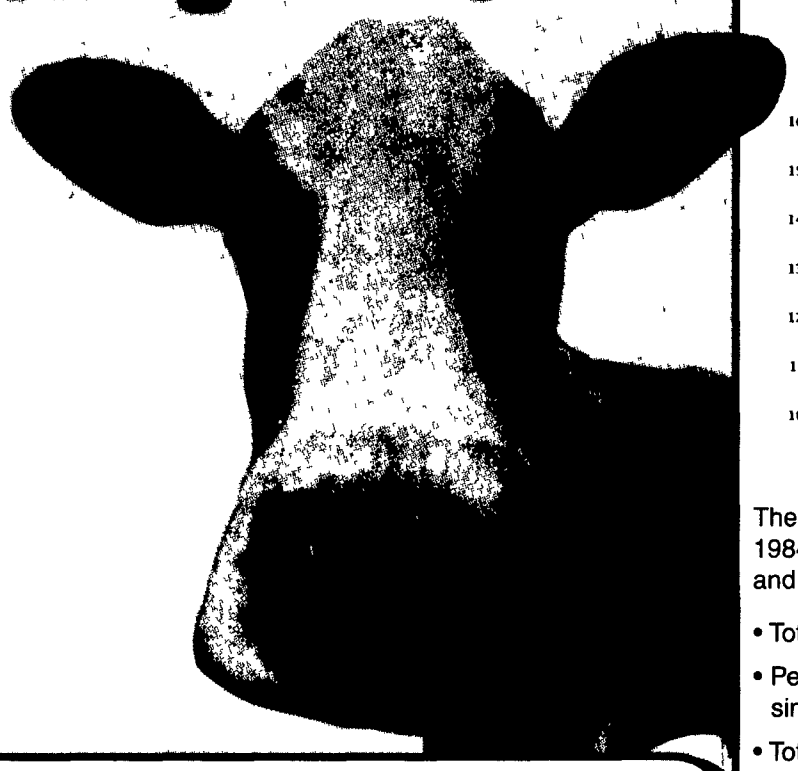
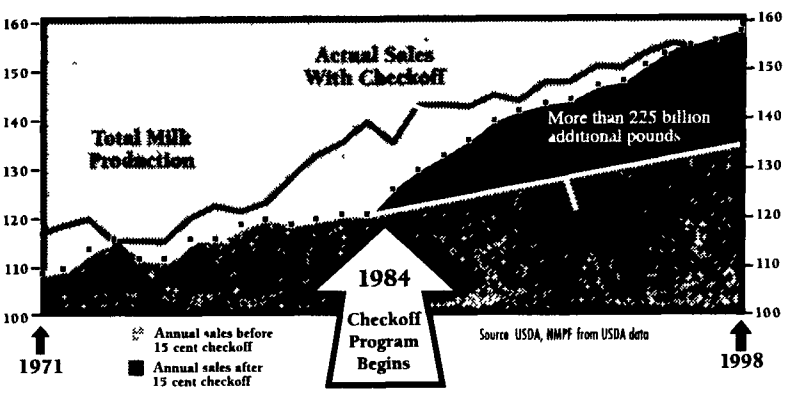
DAIRY CHECKOFF

Working for you!



TOTAL MILK SALES ON THE RISE



The dairy check-off promotion program was started by dairy farmers in 1984 with one purpose - to increase the demand for dairy products... and it's doing just that!

- Total milk sales have increased 11.5% since 1984.
- Per capita consumption of all dairy products has increased 11.5% since 1984 - that's an increase of 72 pounds more dairy per person!
- Total milk sold since 1984 has exceeded USDA projections by more than 225 billion pounds!

IN THE MEDIA

- "got milk?®" TV commercials, outdoor billboards and print ads position milk as a cool beverage and encourage people to increase their calcium intake by drinking milk.
- "Ahh, the power of Cheese™" TV commercials and print ads show that cheese has the power to affect people deeply and urge people to eat more cheese.
- Nutritionists participate in TV, radio and newspaper interviews to dispel common misconceptions about milk and other dairy products.

IN THE SCHOOL CAFETERIA

- To improve milk's image and appeal in schools, dairy farmer dollars continue to address the age-old concern of warm milk.
  - New serving line milk coolers are being placed in schools with the greatest need.
  - Opportunities are being researched to increase milk portion size in schools.
  - Chocolate milk is promoted because kids often prefer chocolate over white milk.
  - School food service personnel are trained in dairy case care/handling.

IN THE CLASSROOM

- Chef Combo influences eating habits for a lifetime by encouraging pre-school and kindergarten students to taste and appreciate dairy foods.
- Pyramid Cafè and Pyramid Explorations teach second and fourth grade students basic nutrition and build positive attitudes toward milk and cheese.
- www.drinkmilk.com shows kids ages 9-14 how to combat the growing calcium crisis and provides teachers with a corresponding lesson plan.

IN THE SUPERMARKET

- To increase incremental milk sales, joint in-store marketing opportunities are created with milk companion foods like cereal.
- Retailers are provided with customized cheese promotions including TV ads and in-store sampling events to increase incremental cheese sales.

IN THE DOCTOR'S OFFICE

- Dairy-friendly patient education materials are provided to doctors, dietitians and nurses.
- Dairy research updates distributed to the medical community highlight dairy's role in preventing osteoporosis, high blood pressure and colon cancer.

OPERATION COLD MILK

Ahh, the power of Cheese.™

Dairy Promotion At Work To Help Drink Up Expanding Milk Supply

COLUMBUS, Ohio — In 2000, dairy production is expected to exceed the 1999 record [illegible]arly 163 billion pounds of [illegible]according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

Finding a home for this increased production is a major challenge for dairy marketers again this year. It will require even more aggressive promotion and new market-building efforts, reported Jenny Wilson director of communication for the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East.

Over the past several years, dairy demand for the most part has been able to meet and sometimes exceed production. Last year, according to USDA estimates, total milk sales grew about three percent to record levels. Fluid milk sales rose about one percent, while overall cheese sales (retail, food service and ingredient usage combined) increased about six percent.

Dairy promotion efforts have helped fuel this strong demand. Two recent cheese marketing campaigns involving partnerships with grocery store retailers led to cheese sales increases averaging seven percent and nine percent, respectively. In the food service channel, a partnership with Wendy's led to the launch of the "Cheddar Lovers' Bacon Cheeseburger," which increased incremental cheese sales at Wendy's by 2.25 million pounds during the promotion period.

"Working with processors and retailers this past year has really paid off for dairy farmers," Wilson said. "When processors and retailers sell more dairy products, dairy farmers sell more milk."

Even with these successes, dairy promotion will need to work even harder to keep pace with current and future production. To accomplish this, promotion leaders are working toward the development of a single unified plan that more tightly focuses farmer dollars on priority targets and issues.

"We need to focus more on investing in those marketing programs that create the greatest demand for dairy products," Wilson said.

Promotion partnerships will be essential in 2000 and beyond to leverage farmer dollars into demand-building efforts. Steps being taken this year include:

- "Ahh, the power of Cheese™" co-marketing campaigns with retailers and processors will run throughout the year.
- A hard-hitting producer- and processor-funded "got milk?®" chocolate milk promotion kicked off in March in thousands of schools and grocery stores. The campaign is supported by aggressive advertising, publicity and grass-roots promotions.
- Food service partnerships are enticing will be negotiated that entice major restaurant chains to use more dairy. One huge win farmers was the new Pizza Hut six-cheese "Ultimate" pizza, which included a pound of total cheese on the large size pizza.
- The "Milk Mustache Mobile 100-City Get Moo-ving With Milk Tour" is on the road again, delivering the "3 servings of milk per day" nutrition message "door to door" to consumers more than 250 million times from April through October.
- The Calcium Coalition, a partnership involving nationally recognized health organizations, uses dairy farmer-funded research in promoting a calcium-rich diet, including dairy, to combat the current calcium deficiency in the United States.

In Ohio, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania, ADADC Mid East is working to increase dairy demand in schools by working with school food service personnel to make sure that milk is served cold, and to see that dairy's nutrition message is reaching children and teens. What is more, a farmer-funded incentive program for school food service directors is working to ensure that pizzas contain 100 percent REAL cheese.

"Dairy producers can best promote dairy products by working with others to boost demand," Wilson added. "That is why producers started the dairy checkoff in the first place. Given the continued increases in production and increasing competition by other products, dairy producers must find the most efficient and effective ways to work with retailers, processors, health organizations, school and commercial food service groups, and others to help build dairy demand."

Grape, Raspberry Growers Can Tour Orchard

CLAYTON, N.J. — Growers and potential growers of grapes and brambles will have the opportunity to tour the progressive fruit growing operation of DeCou Hilltop Orchards on Tuesday, June 6.

Starting at 6:15 p.m. specialists with Rutgers Cooperative Extension and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service will lead a tour of bramble and grapes plantings at DeCou's as they discuss new and innovative technology.

The DeCou's farm is 350 acres of a variety of fruit along Rt. 49 in Shiloh, N.J. According to Rolf DeCou, production manager, approximately eight acres of grapes for wine are planted on various cordon training systems with the varieties Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc, Merlot, and Chambourcin. The DeCou's sell all of their varieties to local wineries.

Dr. Joe Fiola, specialist in small fruit and viticulture with Rutgers Cooperative Extension, will discuss disease management on these varieties and others along with training, pruning, and management systems. The DeCou's also grow about 1½ acres of table grapes, including the varieties Lakemont, Himrod, and Reliance.

Jerry Frecon, agricultural agent with Rutgers Cooperative Extension, will lead the discussion of table grape varieties and management.

Dr. Brad Majek, extension specialist in weed management with Rutgers Cooperative, will discuss common weed problems and weed management in new and established grape and bramble plantings.

Irrigation and water management will also be an important focus of the meeting at DeCou's. Mary Beth Sorentino, irrigation specialist with the USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service, will discuss water needs and systems for low water usage and cost sharing programs available to grape and bramble growers. The DeCou's low water use system will be observed.

Fiola and DeCou will also discuss new raspberry cultivars and training and management systems. Many of Fiola's newest primocane and floricane varieties have been under test at DeCou's, as well as established varieties such as Canby, Heritage, Reivelle, and blackberry cultivars. The DeCou's market most of their raspberries through their farm market or directly to other markets in southern New Jersey.

Dr. George Hamilton, specialist in pesticides and pest management with Rutgers Cooperative Extension, will be in attendance to discuss proposed revisions to the N.J. Pesticide Code affecting private applicators, most of whom are growers. New Jersey Pesticide Applicator Units in the private category and core will be given.

A complete copy of the program with directions is available by contacting Jerome L. Frecon at (856) 307-6450 or by e-mail at gloucester@aesop.rutgers.edu.

No Time for Boredom at Stuck Farm

Dave Stuck adds corn and protein supplement into the TMR Mixer outside of the freestall barn at Plum Bottom. The free-stall barn has 288 stalls and Stuck plans to be up to capacity soon.

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) - "It must be something you really can't help. It's got to be a sickness," joked Dave Stuck of Belleville, Mifflin County, when asked why he dairy farms.

Not raised on a farm, Stuck went from milking zero to 190 cows in twelve short years and plans to add about 100 more. He thrives on the challenge of doing more.

The dream of dairy farming began with Dave's father, Barry. Dave worked on several farms throughout high school and college. He and his parents formed a partnership after Dave graduated from Penn State with an Ag Science degree.

They started farming in 1989 with 45 cows while renting the Heide Farm, owned by the Hayes family, on the Back Mountain Road between Belleville and Reedsville.

"Dad and I worked our way up to 60 cows, then 80. It was obvious that the more cows we'd have, the easier it'd be financially," said Stuck.

Dave and his wife, Jennifer, and daughters, Julia, 4, and Laura, 1, still live on Heide Farm, although Dave's herd outgrew the facilities by 1997. They then moved their dairy operation next door to Plum Bottom Farm, owned by the Rodgers family, and bought 100 more cattle.

Stuck rents the large dairy facility at Plum Bottom, including 600 tillable acres and 75 acres pasture. The partnership owns 80 acres. He plants 350 acres of corn, 150 acres of soybeans, and 180 of an alfalfa and grass mix. Dave's goal is to increase the herd to nearly 300.

Although beginning as a dream, the reality of dairy farming for the Stucks hinges on the bottom line. "Regardless of how well we love what we do, we have to make a profit. The cows are the variable," said Stuck. "Our land, feed, and buildings are fixed. We make a profit per cow, so we're adding more cows.

"Once we decided to expand, we researched the cost of building a new facility for 200 cows. We couldn't cash flow it. It would have taken 400 cows, and we didn't want to go that far yet," he said. "The money it cost us to retrofit the parlor into a double-six herringbone with automatic take-offs at Plum Bottom is relatively inexpensive compared to building a brand new parlor. Plum Bottom's freestall barn is set up for 288 cows. We're remodeling the entire barn for cow comfort. I firmly believe in a stall for every cow."

Stuck depends upon three full-time milkers, Teretha Kanagy, Carolyn Loucks, and Dale Williamson. One person milks per shift at 5 a.m., 1 p.m., and 9 p.m. Doug Miller of Belleville serves as crop manager and field man.

Galen Kenepp feeds calves on weekends. Dave's father feeds calves weekday mornings, while Jennifer feeds calves weekday afternoons. Dave's parents keep the books and write the checks, while Dave handles the day-to-day management.

"It takes 5 hours for each person to milk, clean up, scrub the parlor - to do anything that keeps the milk inspectors happy. On a bad day, the parlor barely stops," Dave said. "I feed the cows 99% of the time, bring the cows to the parlor two out of three milkings, scrape the manure, do herd checks, and simple vet work - administer calcium and dextrose IVs — in the parlor during milking."

"We aren't too speedy. Everything that happens during each milking is recorded - when milking started, any medications administered, fresh dates, amount of milk, temperature of milk to make sure the compressor is working - everything."

"We run a very simple operation. If you find a problem, correct it. If a cow's sick, make her better. If she's dead, drag her out," said Stuck. "No one told me how to do things. I read a lot and visited a lot of farms to learn. We just do what's best for us. One thing we do differently is not using artificial insemination. I know the AI genetics is much better than the bulls I have, but detecting cows in heat and getting them serviced requires a lot of labor and time. Our cows breed. We have no problem with cows not settling. It's our biggest key to making milk constantly."

Stuck's DHIA records show a herd average pushing 24,000. He maintains a 25% cull rate. Dave admits that his farm right now is caught between being a large family farm and a smaller large-herd production operation.

"We're at that in-between stage. I have to manage people and still do my share of the workload," said Stuck. "But I can't micromanage every detail. That's why it's so important to communicate with employees about everything that happens in the milking parlor."

"I keep focused on the direction the farm is going and rely on input from all employees. The management of people is getting easier," he said. "It's hard going from a doer to a manager, especially when you're working right along with them. I quickly learned to be decisive. Explain how you want it done and encourage them to do it that way."

Dave's goal of owning his own farm is slowly becoming a reality. In 1995, his parents purchased a 33-acre neighboring farm and currently live there.

Barry continues to work full-time off the farm as an accountant, and Dave's mother Jean works as a medical transcriptionist. The partnership purchased 80 acres of land near Heide Farm in 1996. And, all the while, Dave's wishing for what every dairy farmer is wishing for - better milk prices.

"I'd be a much better interviewer if the price of milk were up," he added with a laugh. "If I could buy a farm and support my family with just 50 cows I would. I didn't set out to get this large. But the nice thing about growing in size is you don't have to be there seven days a week."

"As a manager, you do have to live with the decisions you make. Ambition is what drives you. If you like what your doing, and you want to succeed, and no one's telling you differently, then you're succeeding."

Dairylea Cooperative Supports Changes

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Inc. supports changes to the formulas for Class III and Class IV that were proposed by the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) at the recent U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) hearing in Alexandria, Virginia.

"The make allowance issue is important to farmers and manufacturers alike," said Edward Gallagher, Vice President of Planning and Regulatory Policy for Dairylea. "Unfortunately, in Federal Order Reform's implementation, the USDA excessively raised make allowances which lowered Class III and blended prices to dairy farmers."

Dairylea and other major dairy cooperatives worked with the NMPF in developing a proposal, which, if adopted, would increase blended milk prices in the Northeast by 5¢ to 10¢ per hundredweight. Changes to the current pricing system for cheese and butter/powder products, which were presented by the NMPF at last week's hearing, include:

•Updating the current milk manufacturing cost allowance for cheeses, butter and nonfat dry milk by replacing the USDA's outdated Rural Business Cooperative Service (RBCS) data and the California dairy product manufacturing cost surveys, with the most recent manufacturing cost data from those two surveys;

•Absent current whey manufacturing cost data in the RBCS and California surveys, determining the whey manufacturing cost allowance by using the nonfat dry milk make allowance plus approximately one cent per pound to reflect the higher costs incurred in drying whey; and •Establishing the Class IV butterfat price by deducting approximately 6¢ per pound from the butterfat price, using a formula that does not impact producer revenue from other classes.

"This balanced approach takes into account the dairy farmers' need to have a fairer formula to determine Class III prices, but it also recognizes the importance of cheese manufacturers to the livelihood of dairy farmers." Gallagher said.

The USDA is not expected to issue a final decision until the end of the year.

Franklin County Cow Numbers Up From 20 Years Ago

Phil Wagner
Franklin Co. Dairy Ext. Agent

The trends occuring in dairying in Franklin County, Pennsylvania's number two dairy county, mirror those occuring in other major dairy counties in the United States.

Farm numbers continue to decline, and many of those remaining in the business are increasing in cow numbers. The dairy cow population continues to hover around 45,000 cows. Twenty years ago cow numbers stood at 37,000. Average herd size is 100 cows.

Building of new dairy facilites, especially freestall barns, continues at a rapid pace. Many 1970's vintage cow housing facilites are fully depreciated and out-dated when it comes to cow comfort, cow handling, and ease of feeding. Many are placing a new freestall barn at an ideal site and walking the cows to an existing parlor that is still fairly efficient. A new parlor may be part of the future at some of these dairies.

Specialization is occuring more each year, especially in the areas of contract heifer raising and custom planting, harvesting, and manure handling. As farms increase in cow numbers more feed is being purchased.

This includes grains, Western hay, and silage purchased on contract from neighbors. More corn silage and less hay crop silage is being fed each year as cow numbers increase. The land base is shinking due to pressures from both expanding dairies and residential/industrial development.

The county has a group of purebred dairy cattle breeders that have been capitalizing on the opportunties available with marketing dairy genetics. This has provided increased income without the necessity of major facility additions and significant increase in cow numbers. Another segment of producers have successfully transitioned to intensive rotational grazing as a means of cost and investment control.

As herd size continues to increase, key areas of focus have become people management, marketing issues, and environmental concerns. As long as dairy remains a viable industry in Pennsylvania, Franklin County will continue to be a key player.

Mathie Hits Million-Unit Milestone

PLAIN CITY, Ohio—March 14 was a historic day for Select Sires as 7HO3707 Paradise-R Cleitus Mathie★TL produced his one millionth unit of semen.

At 12 years of age, Mathie is the second bull in the federation's 35-year history to achieve this milestone, the first being Fisher-Place Mandingo-Twin.

Mathie, now scored Excellent (94), first came into the Select Sires active lineup in July 1993 as a graduate of the Program for Genetic Advancement (PGA) sire -sampling and proving system. In just his first six months on the lineup, Select sold nearly 50,000 units of Mathie semen.

In 1994, Mathie ranked second at Select for number of units sold. By 1995, Mathie was the number one selling bull for Select, a feat he went on to accomplish again in 1997 and 1999. In fact, Mathie has ranked either first or second in unit sales for Select since 1994. His heavy use is well documented by the 21,000 plus daughters in his U.S. sire summary.

"When you see the Mathie daughters, it's obvious why he is our top selling bull," said Bill Thompson, vice president of marketing and development. "The Mathies have outstanding udders and feet and legs and they are wet. Once dairy producers see how they perform, they continue to use Mathie over and over. Mathie is Select's ultimate customer satisfaction sire."

Sire Analyst Charlie Will, who acquired the bull for PGA sampling, is in total agreement with Thompson. "The Mathie daughters just get better with age. He is the kind of bull who will sire a Good Plus 2-year-old that will go on to score Very Good as a 3-year-old and then Excellent as 4-year-old. The Mathie daughters are the type of cows that stay in the herd for a long time. All dairymen want high-producing, long-lasting cows."

It's this longevity that contributes greatly to Mathie's +3.0 for Productive Life. At 99% reliability, Mathie is one of the highest bulls in the breed for this measure of longevity.

"We're milking 25 Mathie daughters and we are still using him heavily," said Bill Ramsey of Paradise Valley Farms where Mathie was bred. "He is our premier sire because we know what we are going to get and we like it. We have some daughters scored as high as 91 points."

Mathie is the result of Ramsey's mating of the now world-renowned Paradise-R Bell Sears to Cleitus.

Ramsey said, "When we make our breeding decisions, we want the resulting bulls to sire daughters that look and perform like their maternal line and Mathie does that. His good daughters look just like Bell Sears did."

Agway, Southern States Announce Retail Relationship

SYRACUSE, N.Y. and RICHMOND, Va. — Agway Inc. and Southern States Cooperatives, Inc. announced the signing of a letter of intent to pursue discussions toward the creation of a relationship to serve Agway consumer dealers in northeastern U.S.

The letter of intent provides for the two cooperatives to work together to develop a product distribution and marketing system that will serve dealers with a full line of branded and non-branded products, as well as marketing and advertising support to develop the cooperatives' brands and trademarks over a larger geographic area.

Southern States would assume all dealer marketing, development, operations, distribution, and logistics associated with the consumer wholesale business operated by Agway and would provide Agway-branded products.

Agway would continue to manufacture, promote, distribute and sell the Agway and Legends bagged feed products through the dealer channel in the Northeast. Agway would also provide Agway Feathered Friend bird food, Agway seed and Seedway's commercial vegetable seed and turf seed products in this market.

The new product distribution and marketing system is expected to be in place by July 2000. Terms were not disclosed.

"We are very excited about this new opportunity with Agway," said Wayne Boutwell, president and CEO of Southern States. "We can achieve the size and scope of business that is needed to deliver optimum value to new customers and our existing farmer-owners and dealer network."

Currently, Agway and Southern States co-own a bagged feed manufacturing plant in Gettysburg, Pa., and are co-owners of a pet food joint venture with four other farmer-owned cooperatives.

Optimizer Creates Firm, Texturized Seedbed Surface

BRILLION, Wis. — A firm and texturized seedbed surface is a key element for improved seed germination. The new Optimizer Pulverizer from Brillion promises to achieve both of these conditions.

By itself, or pulled behind a tillage tool, the Optimizer Pulverizer creates the optimum seedbed surface — firm and texturized without air pockets.

"A good, firmed seedbed maximizes moisture retention, increases the capillary action of water to the seed and root zone, and provides for the best possible seed-to-soil contact," said Tim Geary, marketing manager for Brillion Iron Works, Inc. "This results in more uniform germination and higher yields.

"With an average operating weight of 200 pounds per foot of width, and an open-wheel design, the Optimizer Pulverizer has enough weight to break clods and texturize the seedbed without over-packing the soil," Geary said. By leaving a texturized surface, the Optimizer Pulverizer finished the soil in a way that helps reduce wind erosion, water erosion and surface crusting. This leaves the soil in excellent condition and ready to plant. A better seedbed helps get crops off to the best possible start and sets the plant up to flourish."

The Optimizer Pulverizer from Brillion creates the optimum seedbed — firm and level without air pockets, breaking clods and firming the seedbed without over packing the soil.

The unique interlocking wheel design allows the Optimizer Pulverizer to be used in wetter, trashier conditions without build-up on the wheels.

"We designed the Optimizer Pulverizer so that each section drives as one gang. That means less trash and dirt buildup between the wheels," Geary said.

The Optimizer Pulverizer is available in three-point hitch models in working widths from 10 feet to 20 feet, and pull-type models in working widths from 10 feet to 46 feet. All are built with interlocking 20-inch ductile iron wheels that carry a 5-year limited warranty against breakage. Drawbar length telescopes from 13 feet, 11 inches to 19 feet, 1 inch on 28- and 46-foot models.

Land Improvement, Composting Site Field Day June 16-17

WOOSTER, Ohio — The Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center will host the Land Improvement and Composting Site Field Day beginning Friday, June 16, and ending in the early afternoon on Saturday, June 17.

The event is sponsored by the center's Ohio Composting and Manure Management (OCAMM) program and will address manure management and composting issues. The field day will provide opportunities to learn more about manure handling and composting fundamentals, including the benefits of composting and the importance of the new composting pad to OARDC scientists.

"We don't really have plans at this time of continuing the field day from year to year. When the Ohio Land Improvement Contractor's Association chose this site for their annual field day, we saw an opportunity to bring together OCAMM stakeholders to address manure management issues," said OCAMM Coordinator Mary Wicks.

The proposed composting site includes a 30,00-square-foot concrete composting pad with an adjacent 30,000-square-foot area for expansion and summer composting. The concrete pad has been designed with air ducts embedded in the pad to enhance drying and will provide the capability to produce commercial-grade composts as well as carry out high-quality research on smaller composting piles.

A treatment wetlands constructed adjacent to the composting pads will intercept and treat runoff from the composting area, minimizing the potential for nutrient contamination. The design calls for a series of three treatment cells for each pad located downhill from the composting area.

Composting addresses two major concerns that were expressed by an OARDC nutrient management team led by agricultural engineer Ted Short in 1998: (1) manure nutrients are produced in excess of crop needs at the Wooster Campus, and (2) the high volume of liquid manure from the OARDC dairy facilities presents the greatest challenge. The team concluded that composting provides the greatest potential for addressing these concerns and meeting nutrient balance objectives.

"We expect to have people with interests in livestock, manure management, and/or composting. In addition to educational seminars and tours, participants will have the opportunity to discuss issues with representatives from the Natural Resource Conservation Service, Ohio Environmental Protection Agency and Ohio Department of Natural Resources," Wicks said.

The event kicks off on Friday morning at 9 a.m. with a seminar series that will last until noon. The topics will include manure handling alternatives and regulations, composting principles and systems, and compost siting and runoff treatment. Each session should last about 20 minutes. Friday's program is expected to be beneficial for personnel from regulatory agencies such as soil and water conservation districts.

Saturday's educational seminars will begin at 10 a.m. and end at 2 p.m. They will be geared more toward the general public. Topics will cover manure handling regulations, livestock industry and expansion in Ohio, and composting principles and utilization.

"Visitors can learn the principles of composting and the use of composting for manure management," Wicks said.

During the two-day event, there will be tours and demonstrations from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday and from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday. The tour topics will include composting site design and construction, drain tile installation, the OARDC Composting Research Center, windrow composting, vermicomposting, dead animal composting, and nutrient management planning.

For more information, call Mary Wicks at (330) 202-3533.

Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Receives Grant

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's dairy promotion checkoff programs are on a quest to ensure cold milk is served in public schools. Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, American Dairy Association/Dairy Council Middle Atlantic and the American Dairy Association, Inc. were collectively awarded a $92,500 matching grant for the year 2000 from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture to apply to this goal.

"The school lunch program is a win-win situation for our farmers and our students," said Debra Summerall, PDPP spokesperson. "Milk on the school meal line provides students an excellent source of calcium, needed for building strong bones during adolescence, and farmers a demand for their product. However, if not served under 40 degrees, students will bypass the calcium and eight other nutrients essential for good health that are found in milk for a less nutritional beverage."

In an effort to increase milk consumption in school, organizations have continued to work closely with school food service in Pennsylvania through "The Dairy Difference: Meeting the Needs of Pennsylvania School Children," an active plan that includes four important areas — "Operation Cold Milk," Chocolate Milk Marketing Promotion, Food Safety and Quality and School Food Service Advisory Council.

"Operation Cold Milk" is proactive approach to solving the warm milk problem in schools. Pennsylvania's dairy farmer-funded programs will use the grant to provide one of the following, depending on the respective territory in which the school is located: a serving line milk cooler, a Curton milk cooler curtain, an ice barrel for milk, cooler wraps or funds toward the purchase of a new full-size milk cooler.

"Milk on the serving line will only be purchased and consumed if it is cold," explained Joyce Abercrombie, ADADC Mid East director of school programs. "Our studies show that 60 percent of children who don't currently drink milk at school would drink milk if it were colder. The cold bags and other non-electric coolers offer an ideal alternate serving solution."

Placement of the coolers and ice barrels will also offer the opportunity for students to purchase milk at multiple sites in the school setting. The net effect is that children will receive the calcium they need to increase bone development, while increasing the sales of milk at school — a win-win situation for students and farmers.

Complementing "Operation Cold Milk," a chocolate milk marketing promotion will be instituted this spring with a portion of the PDA grant. "The marketing project will serve as a catalyst to change behavior and entice children to purchase chocolate milk," Abercrombie explained. "This will positively impact school sales."

Staff from all regions will reinforce food safety and quality techniques through Serving it Safe training workshops. These workshops will key in on dairy handling to insure a quality product is presented on the lunch line to students.

In addition, school food service directors will have access to the Cold is Cool! Milk Handling Workshop Video Kit. To build on these principles, Milk Temperature Quality Assurance program materials will be provided free of charge to directors by request. These materials include digital thermometers and data recording sheets for tracking milk temperature. The audits will aid in determining which school will receive the non-electric milk coolers, electric coolers and milk curtain Curtrons.

According to Carolyn Weaver, nutrition education specialist for ADA/DC Middle Atlantic, school food service staff learned through the program the importance of monitoring milk temperatures throughout the day.

"The only way to guarantee that the milk is cold is to check the temperature when it arrives at the school and at the beginning of each lunch period," Weaver said. "The bottom line is that students will not drink milk that is not ice cold. The milk temperature kits provide the tools and incentive to maintain optimal quality."

Rounding out school fund service focus enabled by the grant, the School Food Service Advisory Council, created in the 1998-99 school year with funding from PDA, will be continued during the 1999-2000 school year to identify key issues affecting school lunch programs. This council contains past and current presidents of the Pennsylvania School Foodservice Association, an American School Foodservice Association executive board member and foundation member, representatives from PDA and the Pennsylvania Department of Education and other prominent school food service directors in Pennsylvania.

Workshop Set On Agriculture, Environmental Laws

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Agricultural educators and others who help young farmers understand the interplay of food production and environmental protection can attend a two-day workshop sponsored by Penn State's Dickinson School of Law and College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Environmental Law and Regulation Applied to Agriculture" is scheduled at Dickinson's Agricultural Law Research and Education Center in Carlisle June 20-21. The workshop will highlight how state and federal environmental agencies manage and monitor agricultural activities.

High school vocational agriculture teachers and educators, cooperative extension faculty and staff, and high school science and government teachers are encouraged to attend.

John Becker, Penn State professor of agricultural economics and one of the workshop's instructors, explained that he and Ag Law Center executive director Christine Kellett hope to capitalize on the special role that vocational agriculture teachers play in helping young and older farmers learn about their industry and the issues that influence it.

"By virtue of their contacts with current and future agricultural producers, helping these teachers to understand the issues will help them teach many students, who, in turn, will meet their regulatory requirements," he said. "A similar multiplication of effort and potential impact happens with extension staff."

The workshop will cover several topics, including traditional solutions to environmental problems, right-to-farm laws, state and federal sources of regulatory authority, the Clean Water Act, EPA/USDA Unified Strategy For Dealing With Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations, regulation of activities taking place on wetlands, regulation of the sale and use of pesticides, and food safety-/biotechnology.

Registration fee for the course, which is funded in part by a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, is $25. Successful completion of the workshop and a take-home exam will earn registrants enrolled in a graduate-degree program one credit through Penn State. High school vocational agriculture teachers will be given priority because of limited space.

For more information, contact the Ag Law Center by phone at (717) 241-3517 or by e-mail at aglaw@psu.edu, or visit the center's World Wide Web site at http://www.dsl.edu/aglaw.html.

Vegetable Supplemental Herbicide Labels for 2000

Mike Orzolek,
Department of Horticulture
Penn State

PDA has approved a 24 (c)"Special local Needs" registration for the use of Matrix herbicide on transplanted tomato in Pennsylvania.

Matrix (rimsulfuron) from DuPont will give selective control of certain broad leave weeds and grasses when applied at 1.0 ounce per acre rate. It is recommended that Matrix be tank mixed with Sencor (metribuzin) at the rate of 2.0 ounces per acre as a postemergence application 1-3 days after transplanting tomato.

If a second flush of weeds would appear after the initial application of Matrix/Sencor, a second application of the Matrix and Sencor tank mix could be made 14 to 18 days later at the 1.0 ounce per acre rate. Matrix applied postemergence will control the following weeds: volunteer barley, barnyardgrass, annual bluegrass, foxtails, fall panicum, quackgrass (4 inches to 8 inches tall), volunteer wheat, common chickweed, henbit, kochia, mustards, pigweeds, Shepherd's purse, and wild radish. Matrix applied postemergence will also give partial control of the following weeds: Canada thistle (small actively growing thistle), cocklebur, common lambs- quarters, ivyleaf morningglory, hairy nightshade, common purslane, common ragweed, Pennsylvania smartweed, and velvetleaf.

Precautions: Do not apply Matrix within 45 days to harvest, do not exceed 3.0 ounces of Matrix per acre per year, do not use in Matrix in a spray solution or spray additive that reduces water pH below 4.0, and do not apply Matrix through any type of irrigation system.

The Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association holds the registration for the use of Matrix on tomato in Pennsylvania. To obtain a label for the use of Matrix on tomato, contact Bill Troxell, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers' Association, at (717) 694-3596.

Cost-efficient Centurydrain® roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

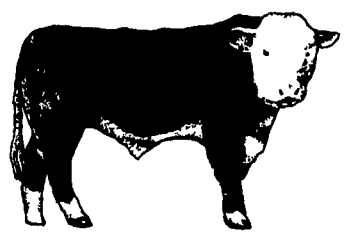
BEEF TIPS

How to choose a bull for herd sire (Part One)



1. What do you want from a bull? That is, what improvements do you need to make to your herd? Frame size up or down? Better milk for calves? More muscle? Disposition improvement? Faster growth? Calving ease improvement?
2. What can you tell us about your cows/heifers that will need bred? (The breeder will need to know your herd's breed, age differential, frame size, recent experience in calf size and calving ease, horn/polled status; and your color preferences.
3. Be sure to ask: "Has the bull been vaccinated and will the breeder guarantee that the bull is fertile (replacement or money back guarantee)?"

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

... "COWS PRODUCE ON IT."

The Martin family has farmed this dairy farm for more than 30 years. Today, Jason and Marie Martin and their four small children live here and farm 200 acres that includes rented ground to feed their high-producing dairy herd.

For the last 30 years, the Martin family has been dairy farming on their 75-acre farm in Lebanon County near Newmanstown. And for most of this time, they have been Purina customers though other programs have been tried for comparison.

Today, Jason and Marie Martin and their four children, Jolin 11, Randall 8, Aryln 3, and Lorlle 2, farm the home place of 75 acres and rent another 150 acres. They raise hay, corn, barley, soybeans and rye to feed their 75 Holstein milk cows and additional replacement heifers.

"We especially like Purina feeds because of their consistency," Martin said. "When you get the next load, it doesn't change much from the previous load. In fact, you can't tell the difference."

And there is good reason to feed Purina. Their rolling herd average is 25,103m. On the most recent DHIA test, 14 cows were milking more than 100 pounds and individual production records go over 30,000m with the top records on No. 79 at 32,700m 1,037f 981p and on No. 3 with 31,139m 1,275f 917p. Even several two-year-olds have milked more than 100 pounds.

The Martins are especially delighted with the new Proteus feeding program they started 15 months ago. Since that time they have increased average production by 2,000 pounds of milk and maintained excellent herd health even with the higher production. In addition, they save money on feed costs.

"In comparison with feeding programs from other companies we have tried, price is a real factor," Martin said. "Purina helps us balance our home-grown feeds and not only did the bought feed cost decrease, we use less of it.

"Purina feeds just work. It is a good feed and the cows produce on it."

The replacement heifers are also on Purina feeds. Calves get Startena, and the Easy Care protein supplement block is used to balance the roughages for the older heifers.

Martin also credits Kin Horning, his on-farm Purina dairy specialist, with knowing cows. And he credits Umbergers, Purina's dealership with good service to the farmer.

"Purina has done a good job for us," Martin said. "(I have no reason to switch. In a word, Purina is a good company."

Peachey Family Finds Contentment in Farming

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — Life is good on the Melvin and Judy Peachey dairy farm in the heart of Big Valley, Mifflin County.

Production is consistently one of the highest in the county. The kids are healthy. The farm well cared for. Maybe that's why the farm is located on Tranquil Lane.

"We give the Lord credit," said Judy. "He's blessed us and provided everything for us."

Melvin's chance to farm on his home farm began four generations earlier. His great-grandfather purchased the farm, and then Melvin's grandfather started farming in 1926.

Melvin and Judy milk 54 Holsteins (20 percent registered) three times a day.

"We have 50 stanchions now. I'd like to add 20 to 25 stalls in the next few years. We like our tie stall. I never want to milk more than 75 cows," Melvin said.

The tie-stall arrangement enables Melvin to have TMR feed in front of the cows at all times. One group TMR has greatly added to herd health and production, especially late lactation cows, with Melvin having recently dried off several cows milking 100+ pounds in good body condition.

This greatly helps production, although he'd like to install a stationary TMR mixer in the future. Melvin mixes half corn silage and half haylege (21 pounds) with high-moisture corn and protein. He credits Russ Kline, a nutritionist with Agri-Basics, for his herd's quality feed program.

"He's a good person to work with," Melvin said. "He pays attention to details."

"We put mattresses in a year and a half ago," Melvin continued, "and started bedding the cows with shavings. These have really added to cow comfort."

The idea to milk three times a day simply cropped up one afternoon three years ago while Melvin and Judy were milking. They went back out to milk that same evening at 11:00 p.m. and haven't regretted it. They now milk at 5:00 a.m., 1:00 p.m., and 9:00 p.m.

"It's been easier on the cows. They were leaking and full," Melvin said. "Our 2-year-olds milk a lot more without wear on their udders. It has helped our herd health. We were on everyday pick-up. Now, with a 2,000-gallon tank, they come every other day. We picked up 3,000 pounds milking three times a day."

"It's nicer for the kids, too," Judy added. 'We're in the house when they go to school and when they come home. One of us waits until they're all asleep at night (11:00 p.m.) before going out to help milk."

Judy milks both mornings and afternoons and keeps the books. She loves gardening, flowers, and baking.

Their oldest son, Michael, 10, bottle-feeds the calves until they're five weeks old. He's also a member of the Mifflin County 4-H Dairy Club. Tonya, 8, and Colton, 5, enjoy doing all the things that younger children love to do on a farm - plus a little housework. Melvin loves to read. He'd like to fill the barn with purebreds someday too.

"If you're just selling milk, it's not worth it. If you're selling cows as a hobby, purebreds are worth it," said Melvin.

Melvin admits that buying into a family farm is much easier than starting farming from scratch. His goals now are to buy the farm, debt free, and stay up to date with the equipment.

"A farm is a great place to raise children," Judy said. 'It's nice working together here at home. There are days we get tired and have bad days like everyone else, but we still like it."

"We're paying the bills and making a living besides," added Melvin.

Lancaster Dairy Industry In Transition

Glenn Shirk
Lancaster Co. Dairy Ext. Agent

The dairy industry in Lancaster County is undergoing a major transition, characterized by a more free market economy, mergers, alliances, expansions, niche marketing, specialization, more contractual agreements, and a rapid adoption of new technologies.

Agri-businesses are seeing who they can merge with or team up with to secure their share of the market, to become more efficient and to improve customer's service.

A similar move is taking place at the farm level. Many farms are expanding herd size in an effort to spread some of their fixed capital costs over more cows to enable them to purchase in bulk and negotiate better prices, to improve labor efficiency and increase milk output per worker.

Some are trying to reduce marketing costs and improve milk prices by producing enough milk to fill a tanker truck every 1-2 days. Being larger, they can hire and train teams of employees to become experts at performing crucial and specific tasks.

Smaller, more traditional farms, in the 40-100 cow size and operated primarily with family help, are finding it more and more difficult to compete with the well-managed, large dairy operations; it's hard for them to be experts in cropping, in herd health and nutrition, in breeding and reproduction, in milking systems and milk quality, in marketing, and in financial and business management.

Many of them are meeting this challenge by specializing in managing the milking cows and arranging for someone else to raise the heifers, harvest the crops and haul the manure. Many are relying upon the advice of expert consultants to help them make the right management decisions.

As an alternative to expansion, some producers are trying to improve cash flow by adding more value to the milk they produce. Some producers are getting more involved in processing their own milk, either individually or in conjunction with other producers, and servicing organic and other niche markets or by selling products directly to consumers others become part-time farms and rely on some non-farm income. Many choose to reduce costs by relying heavily upon intensive grazing.

In recent years, milk output per cow has increased tremendously due in large part to: improved genetics, better nutrition, higher quality and more digestible forages, improved herd health and feeding practices and more emphasis on cow comfort

Dairying can be a good "way of life" and a good place to raise a family, but to attain these benefits it must first be a profitable business. The economic pressures and competition that exists today is putting severe stress on many farm families.

Dairy farmers are to be commended for their optimism, their determination, and their willingness to make necessary changes to improve the viability of their business and enhance the quality of life, while also working hard to protect the environment and produce a quality food for all to enjoy.

Melvin and Judy prefer milking in their tie-stall barn. They'd like to add 25 stalls in the future and increase their herd to 75 cows.

ESTATE AUCTION

"O" SCALE TRAINS

10:00 A.M. SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 2000

RIDGE FIRE COMPANY BLUE ROOM

Along Rt. 23, Between Phoenixville, PA and Rt. 100

Selling exclusively for the Estate of Joseph Alfonsi, Philadelphia, PA, who worked for SEPTA for 45 years and is credited with saving from destruction many trolleys, rail cars, and local railway artifacts. "O" scale seems to have been his last great love, but an HO layout over 50 feet long in the basement speaks of other affections. Included was an HO circus, numerous structures and very complicated trackwork. Selling also a railway library of about 100 volumes, which covers local traction history and other rail topics. Of considerable interest should be accumulated photos, documents and ephemera concerning SEPTA operations an history.

There are 50 locomotives in "O" Scale, including both steam types and diesels from makers such as AHM, Weaver, International Models, Wenzco, Loco Work Shop, Walthers, Scale Craft, Williams, Atlas, All Nation and Lionel. Some of these are rare and desirable. Exact scale models of the real thing!

As many of you know, Mr. Alfonsi was a circus buff, especially Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey. His collection has well over 100 circus cars, many loaded with colorful Wardie Jay wagons and animal cages. His was a motorized outfit, and used old Bulldog Macks, as well as later trucks and tractors. Another fascination was the fabulous Hiawatha and other UP streamliner cousins. Several variations of each graced his shelves, accounting for another 100 pieces.

10% Buyer's Premium Will Apply.

Another auction will be held in the Pavilion at the same time. Likewise, it offers plenty of railroad history. All kinds of railroad hardware, lights, lanterns, books, maps, pictures and ephemera.

There Is No Buyer's Premium In The Pavilion.
